

HUERTA DECLARES HE HAS NO MAN FOR MEXICAN PRESIDENT

And Wilson Accepts This As Conclusive That He Will Not Run For Office Himself

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Administration officials here regarded the statement made today by Provisional President Huerta that "it would be an anomaly for the government to have a candidate," as tantamount to a declaration that he would not be a candidate himself in the coming elections. The tenor of Provisional President Huerta's remarks—that his government would maintain an attitude of "absolute impartiality"—was interpreted by many officials as a general compliance, morally at least, with the proposals made by John Lind for the elimination of Huerta and the holding of a fair election.

Constitutionalists here said that Huerta had pronounced himself impartial merely to remove the suspicion of support to the candidacy of one whom he might favor secretly. Huerta's mention of the army as guarding the polls evoked the comment that in such manner Huerta would exert control over the electoral machinery.

By all in administration circles who heard the news, it was agreed that the subtlety of Huerta's statement was the promise implied in Provisional President Huerta's declaration today would be increasingly difficult and that the United States and foreign nations generally with which it has influence, probably would be inclined to hold the Huerta government rigidly to its own announced program.

STATEMENT MADE BY PRESIDENT HUERTA

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 21.—"Not only would it be an anomaly that the government should have a candidate, but it can be further said that the government has no pretension for nor will it aid any candidate."

In these words, Provisional President Huerta today replied to the question as to whether he favored any candidate in the coming presidential elections.

President Huerta explained the attitude which the administration would maintain as one of "absolute impartiality," and added that it would only take precautionary steps to prevent any disturbance of public order and would suppress any effort in that direction.

RELIGIOUS LINES DRAWN IN MEXICO

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The United States government is taking more than a passing interest in the religious developments in Mexico City. Chief among these has been the defiant opposition by a majority of the Mexican Congress to the appointment of Edward Tamm, one of the leaders of the Catholic party, to the ministry of public instruction.

The opening of a fight by the Liberals in Congress to repress the influence of the Catholic party in government affairs is looked upon here as a sign to a crisis as to whether the United States will continue to support the Huerta government. REFUGEES TELL OF MEXICAN DISORDER

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 21.—The steamer Benito Juarez arrived this morning from Mazatlan and other Mexican ports. She brought fifty passengers. One of them, Dr. Charles W. Bean, who has been practicing medicine for years at Mazatlan, Sinaloa, said that he left the country on the advice of Consul Stratton of Mazatlan. Conditions were becoming intolerable. A. R. Orcutt, a San Diego man connected with the Smithsonian Institution, said he came north because disturbed conditions compelled him to abandon his work.

Lure White Women Into Negro Sect

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21.—The existence of a negro religious sect was called tonight to the attention of the police. It was said that most of their converts had been white women.

MURDERER OF MADERO REPORTED ASSASSINATED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Lieutenant Colonel Francisco Cardenas, alleged by the Constitutionalist forces of Mexico to have been the assassin of Francisco I. Madero, former president of Mexico, has been assassinated, according to advices received at the headquarters of the Constitutionalist forces today.

JAPANESE MAY GO TO FLORIDA

Governor Jennings Secures Orientals As Beginning of Colonization Scheme

(Special to the Republican).

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 21.—L. S. Jogi, a Japanese farmer of Southern California, is here arranging for the transportation of a party of some twenty Japanese to Florida. Governor Jennings of that state has a tract of $1,000 acres, which he is putting into intensive cultivation, and Jogi is the colonization agent for this coast.

This project is declared to be of importance to California in more than one way. Should Jogi's plans become successful as he expects, the best of the Japanese farming element might be taken from this state and placed on the new tracts of land which are being opened up in Florida.

Mogi states that the land on the east Florida coast is of a black and sandy nature, especially fitted for the growth of vegetables and oranges. The natives have been content to grow cotton and corn, with a return of $25 per acre.

Jennings, however, decided to develop his big tract and has, in addition to the colonization agency, one in St. Louis and another in Kansas City.

TO PROMOTE FAIR IN WEST INDIES

Fernbach Leaves To Join Other National Commissioners at Washington

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—O. H. Fernbach, a former San Francisco newspaper man, appointed by President Wilson a member of the commission to visit the Central American republics and West Indies in behalf of the Panama-Pacific International exposition, left today for Washington.

James Flynn Stuenkel, General Commissioner of the exposition, and John P. Dwyer, of the National Capital, and the commissioners will arrange for their departure on the U. S. cruiser, Des Moines, which has been set aside for this mission.

D. O. Lively, chief of the livestock department for the exposition, who is now in the East, will leave for the South on the same cruiser as member of the commission appointed to visit the South American countries.

ELEVEN LAWYERS WORK FOR THAW

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 21.—Eleven lawyers from four states and the Dominion of Canada were in Concord today and night to help Harry K. Thaw.

It is understood that the principal argument in Thaw's behalf will be made by Judge William M. Chase of Concord.

HEAVY FALL OF SNOW IN EAST

SUPERIOR, Wis., Sept. 21.—Nearly two inches of snow fell early this morning between Superior and Duluth, according to reports brought in tonight by people who spent Sunday there.

Particulars of the establishment of the weather bureau in 1884, was made when snow fell at nearly all points in northern Minnesota and around the shores of Lake Superior. The earliest previous snow fall was recorded September 21, 1907.

STREET BATTLE IN DUBLIN; MANY ARE HURT

Forty-two Hospital Victims of Clash Between Police and Strikers

MANY PARADES OCCUR

Crowd of 10,000 Makes Way Through City, Smashing Car Windows

DUBLIN, Sept. 21.—Dublin's streets again were the scene today of a battle between the police and strikers. Many heads were broken. Thirty-five civilians and seven policemen are in hospitals as the result of the engagements, and many others were treated for minor injuries.

The number of men in Dublin either on strike or locked out is about 20,000. They have many supporters and are in a savage spirit. In the rioting today the police used their clubs freely, and the strikers retaliated with bottles and other missiles so fiercely that one of the mounted police was knocked from his horse and severely injured, and several foot-policemen were carried off on stretchers.

Many strike parades were held, the cheering workmen and their allies marching through various parts of the city. Liberty Hall was converted into a strike headquarters. Street cars were held up and all but wrecked.

"Police reserves charged one of the processions when people from the side streets began to stone the cars. Several were injured in this skirmish. The crowd, which numbered 10,000, broke into a charge against the police, smashing car windows as it proceeded, until it was met by a large squad of mounted police in Lombard street. There the fighting became more furious. The police, twice charged with their batons and finally succeeded in dispersing the rioters.

NERVY AVIATOR RECORD TURNS OVER SIDEWISE IN VERSAILLES FLIGHT

VERSAILLES, Sept. 21.—The French aviator Pegoud, who recently made an upside down flight, accomplished today another feat in his but wrecked. He was trying to make a record of proving the stability of the upside down plane. After mounting to a great height Pegoud dipped the left wing and his machine slowly turned over on its side. The aviator flew for some seconds head downwards, but gained the upright position by gracefully looping the loop.

3,000 MINERS TO RETURN TO WORK

White Will Act As Arbitrator of Dispute in the Michigan District

COLUMBUS, Sept. 21.—Three thousand miners from the Hay City and Saginaw, Mich., district will go back to work Tuesday after a week's idleness, as the result of a conference held here tonight between representatives of miners and operators. John P. White, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, was named arbitrator of the dispute, which will be presented to him Thursday at his headquarters in Indianapolis.

The unofficial strike of the miners against the operators following the dismissal of three miners. Operators asserted the dismissal did not conflict with terms of a blanket contract existing between Michigan miners and operators and the miners maintained the dismissal violated the contract. President White will decide whether the dispute is subject to arbitration, and if not will act as judge of the conditions which led to the discharge of the miners.

"There is no doubt that the supervision of mines and miners' affairs should be done better by the department of labor than the department of the interior under which it is now," said White. "Regardless of the men at the heads of the two departments, the labor department could handle our questions better. We shall favor action by Congress to make this change."

SECOND CHILD OF KING BORN DEAF

Daughter As Well As Son of Alfonso of Spain Cannot Hear

WESTMINSTER, Eng., Sept. 21.—Relatives of the Queen of Spain have been shocked by the news that the second daughter of the queen, like her second son, will be both deaf and dumb, says the Manchester Guardian.

It is feared that the little Spanish princess is totally deaf and unless this is corrected she probably will never be able to speak.

The reports of the royal physicians and specialists have nearly broken the heart of the queen. She goes constantly with her children to the convents of the religious orders in and near Madrid to ask for prayers of intercession on their behalf and particularly at late on behalf of her young daughter.

MILAN, Sept. 21.—The Italian ministers of post and telegraphs, T. Callasano died today at a banquet while delivering a speech. Death was due to heart disease.

Albanians May Attack Servians

BELOGRADE, Sept. 21.—The situation is grave along the Albanian frontier where Albanians, armed with modern rifles, are assembling to attack Servia. Albanian agents have entered Servian territory and are endeavoring to stir to rebellion those Albanians who heretofore have been at peace.

It is believed here that the hostile preparations are due to foreign intrigues against Servia and Montenegro. As a consequence Servia feels bound to reoccupy the strategic positions in Albania which the action of the powers compelled her to abandon.

COMPLETE ANARCHY

SALONIKI, Sept. 21.—Complete anarchy reigns in Albania. The provincial foreign minister, Mufid Bey, who has just returned from Europe, has summoned his Albanian subjects to arms to march against Essad Pasha, the former commander-in-chief of the Turkish forces at Scutari.

Essad Pasha has raised the Austro flag and Mufid Bey has called upon the government at Avlona to surrender him.

The minister has also seized the customs house in Durraz.

THOUSANDS VIEW BODY OF GAYNOR

Letter of Eulogy From Ex-President Taft Is Read

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—In a double line that never seemed to decrease in length as the day wore on, thousands of persons today filed through the flower-filled rotunda of the city hall and past the body of William J. Gaynor, lying in state.

About a fifth of the crowd were women and children. Mayor Kline issued an order to keep the rotunda open until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning if necessary so that all who came might pay their personal tribute to the memory of his predecessor.

All last night the police on guard around city hall park had difficulty in keeping the crowds moving, as many tried even at an inordinately early hour to get in line to view the body. Three policemen and three firemen in the effort to keep the line moving paid attention during the night to the coffin, which was draped in the stars and stripes and the mayor's flag, while beneath could be seen the colors of the Union Jack, placed there in the belief that the Gaynor family in recognition of the courtesy extended by the city of Liverpool.

The tier rests on the spot where the bodies of many famous men have lain in state.

"Alleged incidents were numerous. A crowd of about 100 men, who were part of the crowd, came, whose part was to keep the line moving. It was alleged he was being persecuted by the police and which resulted in an investigation and also the removal of the body's picture from the rotunda gallery. An old lady was heard to murmur: 'God be with the soul.'" beside the coffin, as she paused Mayor Gaynor's closing the saloons at 1 o'clock had saved her boy from evil companions with whom he loathed in these places. Two aged women who followed into the rotunda on crutches, delayed the movement of the line several seconds as they said a prayer.

The first person in line was a German baker who has taken his place at the doors after quitting work several hours previously. Closely following him were several Chinese and later in the day were Japanese.

Tonight the rotunda of the city hall was almost filled with floral offerings from "individuals" and organizations from all parts of the United States and from foreign countries.

At three o'clock, Mayor Rev. C. P. Reiser, the pastor, read a letter from former President Taft in which he said:

"I count it a great honor that Mayor Gaynor regarded me as his friend. There was to place in New York state city, judicial or executive or legislative, which would fill me not all him admirably to fill. Everything he did and said had the flavor of an attractive, aggressive and broadly liberal personality that will be and ought to be long remembered."

The public funeral services for Mayor Gaynor will be held from Trinity church at 11 o'clock tomorrow.

CONDUCTOR KILLED BY UNKNOWN TRAMP

Man Had Previously Held Up and Robbed the Brakeman

PHOENIX, Colo., Sept. 21.—Samuel E. Martz, a Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad conductor, was shot and killed this morning by an unknown tramp, who previously had held up and robbed Brakeman Fred of Martz' train, and who now is a fugitive from justice of a $100,000 bond.

When the freight train stopped on the side track to permit the passage of a passenger train, Norman D. Reed, the brakeman, discovered a man beneath one of the cars and ordered him to get out. The man refused to do so, and Reed, by coming toward the brakeman with a drawn revolver and took from Reed a gold watch, $2 in coin and a $100 check for $100.

As quickly as possible Reed called for help and with Conductor Martz started across the track after the robber. Near a lone tree they lost track of the fugitive. Martz returned with his lantern to the tree and discovered the robber hiding there. His order to surrender was answered by a shot and Martz fell fatally wounded.

Reed then went to the station for help and on returning to the tree found the body of Martz had been robbed. No trace of the criminal has yet been found.

PRISON GUARD KILLED BY DESPERATE CONVICT

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 21.—In a desperate encounter with a negro convict who was trying to escape from the institution, Eli B. Steiner, a deputy keeper at the New Jersey state prison, was shot by the prisoner today and died later at a hospital. The convict, William Diamond, wrestled the revolver from the keeper. He was overpowered.

MRS. ROOSEVELT TO ACCOMPANY HUSBAND

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Announcement was made tonight that Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt would accompany her husband on his trip to South America which will start October 4 for Rio Janeiro. Mrs. Roosevelt, however, will not make the extended trip into the interior with the former president.

SULZER AND WIFE WILL TESTIFY AND DENOUNCE MURPHY

Authoritative Statement That Governor Will Rehearse History of Tammany's Prosecution During Year

ALBANY, Sept. 21.—Nothing short of death can prevent Governor Sulzer and his wife from testifying in his impeachment trial if the constitutional objections of his attorneys to the proceedings are overruled.

This statement came tonight from an unquestionable source, it followed weeks of speculation as to whether either of them would testify.

Mrs. Sulzer's testimony had been considered too vital to the case of the defense to permit her to remain silent. The governor has made the most extensive preparation for the presentation of his testimony. It will take the form of narrative from the time, soon after his election, when he avers Tammany Hall and others began to bring pressure upon him to resign his office. He hopes to show, it is understood, that gradually he incurred the animosity of many of the men back of the present proceedings and that the final break came when he refused to be a tool.

Amazing revelations which will involve scores of more or widely known Democratic politicians are predicted.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 21.—Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, when Governor Sulzer accuses of having instigated his impeachment, will be forced to take the witness stand.

THREAT MADE TO DYNAMITE CHURCH

Letter Writer Boasts He Made Recent Attempt on General Otis

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21.—St. Vibiana's Roman Catholic Cathedral was guarded today by police against its threatened destruction by dynamite. A warning placed in the hands of the police linked the threat with various other attempted or successful dynamite outrages here.

The unnamed writer of a letter, announcing that he had made the attempt recently on the life of General Harrison Gray Otis, said that he would visit the cathedral today. He declared that he might, if so inclined, blow up the building. Then, he said he might visit the Los Angeles Times building, erected on the ground where the old Times building was destroyed by dynamite three years ago.

Granting the truth of the writer's declaration that he had sent General Otis, publisher of the Times, the dynamite bomb through the mails last week, the police were inclined to the theory that he had a mad idea of the force of dynamite.

It was suggested that the mysterious dynamite might be operating under a similar mental freak which prompted Carl Warr to enter the police station last November and demand of the police to provide him with a gold watch, which he wanted to blow up with the bomb he carried.

ARRESTED FOR BEATING UP HIS PRISONER

Detective Put In Jail On Charge of Misuse of His Authority

MARTINEZ, Cal., Sept. 21.—R. B. Henry, a detective connected with a private agency, is under arrest here on a warrant sworn out by District Attorney McKenzie, and faces a charge of assaulting Alfred Nelson, while the latter was in custody. The detective, who was taken to the county jail, is charged with the assault on Nelson. The belief that he was connected with the recent hop field riots in Whittland, Cal., when District Attorney Manwell and Deputy Sheriff Riddan were killed. Presumably to obtain evidence from the prisoner Friday night from the county jail to a nearby barroom, where he bought him drinks and then attacked him. Nelson was badly beaten up, it is said.

A charge of misuse of authority may be made against the detective in which case he would face a five year prison term or a $5,000 fine if convicted.

Detective Henry now occupies a cell near that of Nelson, his prisoner.

LYNCHED JUST FOR FRIGHTENING WOMAN

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 21.—Because he frightened a white woman in her home by his strange actions, Henry Cross, a negro, was lynched here last night. Officers searching for him, found his body hanging from the limb of a tree today.

C. E. YOUNG PEOPLE OF COUNTY RALLY IN FRESNO

Preparations For Fall Work
Made In Conference at First Baptist

Delegations From All Parts of County Are Present;
Music a Feature

In an enthusiastic rally at the First Baptist church yesterday at which the work of the various departments of endeavor was outlined for the ensuing year by superintendents and points of view regarding the Los Angeles international convention brought out in brief speeches, the young people of Fresno county prepared for the activities of the fall.

A Lie Can't Live In The Light!

The great modern light that never dies is newspaper publicity.

Advertisers are rigidly careful as to the statements they make through the columns of good newspapers like the Republican, because they know any other course would be fatal.

They advertise to build reputation for service—and the first requisite of service is truth telling in word and deed.

Modern business is done in the open.

Every safeguard is given to the buyer. He is not looked on as a transient of today, but as a friend to be made for tomorrow.

Newspapers watch their advertising as carefully as they do their editorials.

You get a certain degree of insurance when you patronize a merchant who frankly comes into the light and gives you his reasons for wanting your patronage.

were representatives present from societies at Selma, Parlier, Clovis, Merced, Oleaner, Kerman and Etna and a most enthusiastic meeting was held.

Song service led by H. Bryant Ashton opened the meeting at 7:15, following which a brief devotional service was led by Mrs. W. P. Willmott. Dr. Harvey O. Bredon, pastor of the First Christian church, led in Bible study. A vocal solo by Ed. Kemalyan was followed by the afternoon conference work.

Reginald Louch made a strong appeal to the personal workers, urging souls by active contact with people in all degrees of society who might not know of the peace which would be brought by faith.

Mrs. George Robbins spoke of the "Quiet Hour" work, describing the efficacy of the devotion of one hour a day to consideration of things religious.

"Efficiency Work" was treated by Clayton Hinkle of Selma in a brief talk and Leon Legan, who presided at the afternoon sessions, Mrs. Martha Fuller of Fowler spoke of the hospital work to be done by the Fresno county unit.

A cornet solo by Dave Dahlinger was followed by a talk on work of the Los Angeles convention by Samuel Lonsdale county unit president. The missionary committee work was treated by Mervyn Thompson of Oleaner, and prayer meeting was conducted by Mrs. Blanche Wren of Clovis.

At 8:00 o'clock the rally resumed with a song service followed by an oratorical number by the Sigma Chi society of the First Baptist church of which Rev. J. L. Reader, who presided at the afternoon sessions, was offered by Dr. J. W. Conley of the Baptist church, and the address of welcome was delivered by W. P. Willmott, state president of the C. E. Union.

Sentence prayers by members of those present were followed by three-minute talks on "What Helped Me Most at the Los Angeles convention," by Catherine Lonsdale, Lillian Elder, and Catherine Lonsdale. A vocal solo, "Love You, California," by Mrs. C. A. Murdoch was succeeded by minute impressions of the Los Angeles convention by Arthur Galt of Clovis, Charles Korman, Clayton Hinkle of Selma, Mrs. Mary Haminger of Selma and Alva Schaefer.

The consecration service was led by Rev. Shirley L. Shaw, associate pastor of the First Christian church, and a vocal solo was offered by Mrs. Shirley Shaw.

The rally concluded at 7:30. In time to allow the young people to attend the evening services in the churches with the "Silent Brotherhood." A May the Lord watch between me and the while we are absent, one from the other.

The sessions yesterday concluded a two-day conference of Endeavorers in this city, Saturday being devoted to the intermediate societies and yesterday to the seniors, or young people. In charge of the entire conference is Mrs. W. P. Willmott, while the program of the intermediate sessions was arranged by John Drenth and of the seniors by J. L. Reader.

VACATION SONG.
Little bank roll, ere we part,
Let me hold you to my heart,
All the year I've clung to you,
All the year I've clung to you,
You were faithful, you've been true,
Little bank roll, in a day
You and I will start away
To a gay and festive spot:
I'll come back, but you will not.

ADAMS RELEASED ON OWN RECOGNIZANCE

Wounded Man and Contractor Still Maintain Their Previous Statements

Grant A. Adams, who Saturday night shot Fred Pedersen, a night porter, was released on his own recognizance yesterday morning and was under arrest but a short time. Pedersen's wounds yesterday proved not to be serious and it will not be long before he will be able to leave the county hospital. Pedersen still maintains that he was not in Adams' yard and the latter says that he caught Pedersen sneaking toward the house. There the matter rested yesterday.

The police are puzzled over the case. They say that Adams' word is beyond reproach, but that on the other hand the story told by Pedersen seems to be truthful. The officers have no doubt but what some one was prowling around some Saturday night, but whether Pedersen was the man is a mystery. Frank Hill, Adams' next door neighbor, can't identify Pedersen as the man he saw in the dark an hour previous to the shooting.

The police think that Pedersen might have been shot by mistake. Adams says the man he shot is the same man who ran from his yard when he shouted at him. Whether any action will be taken in the court is a matter that had not been determined yesterday.

Pedersen had many callers at the county hospital yesterday and today. He declared that Pedersen was not the "Peeping Tom" kind of a man. "They based their statements on his previous good reputation," Pedersen has been working in the lumber mills at Shaver yesterday and today. He was all morning and registered at the Ogden House. Following the shooting he said that he was on Abby street at that hour because he "could not sleep, and was walking around until he became tired."

RUGS STOLEN; THIEF ESCAPES IN BUGGY

John Cloud and Wife Return Home to Encounter
Thief; Jewelry Taken

Returning to their home at Cherry and Jensen avenues last night, John Cloud and his wife found that the dwelling had been burglarized and two Turkish carpets, valued very highly, had been stolen. Besides jewelry and other articles, Cloud and his wife entered their home through the front door and Mrs. Cloud immediately began to cry when she found the carpets missing. The robber was evidently hiding in the kitchen, as he ran from the back of the dwelling around to the side of the house and escaped in a buggy. Report was made to the police, but as the burglary was outside of the city limits it was turned over to the sheriff's office and Deputy Thorwaldson investigated. Besides the rugs, two gold watches, a bracelet watch and a diamond ring were stolen.

NORTH IMPROVEMENT CLUB CALLS MEETING

The members of the North Fresno Improvement Club will meet tomorrow evening at the home of W. A. Mogrover, corner of Linden and Pine avenues, to take up matters of interest to the organization that have accumulated during the summer vacation. It is probable that a delegate will be named to attend the mass meeting to be called in the near future to take up the matter of a city beautiful campaign that has been underway now for some time. A movement to enlarge the membership of the club will also be taken up in the near future. The organization meets every month and includes that district with in the confines of Olive, Blackstone, Clinton and 12th avenues.

Heeray! Baby To Rule the House

No Longer Do Women Fear the Greatest of All Human Blessings.

It is a comfort to know that these much-talked-of pains that attend the process of child-bearing may easily be avoided. No woman need fear the slightest discomfort. She will find herself well with the very best-known and time-honored remedy, "Mother's Friend."

This is a penetrating, external application of the abdominal muscles and ligaments. They naturally expand without the slightest strain, and thus not only banish all tendency to nervous-twitching spells, but there is an entire freedom from nausea, discomfort, sleeplessness and dread that so often leaves their impress upon the babe.

The occasion is, therefore, one of unbounded, joyful anticipation, and too much stress cannot be laid upon the remarkable influence which a mother's happy, peaceful disposition has upon the health and fortunes of the generation to come.

You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1.00 a bottle. Write today to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 230 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for an instructive book.

REGULAR WORK TO BEGIN AT NORMAL

Regular class work will begin at the Fresno State Normal school today with an enrollment of approximately two hundred students. Registration was concluded last week and the schedule was gone through on Friday morning. The traction company is now running the cars out of Union avenue to the Normal grounds.

This week will probably see the trying out of a daily luncheon to be served on the Normal grounds. An efficient cook has been secured and several Normal girls will act as waitresses at the noon hour. The luncheon will be served in the dining room of the temporary Normal buildings and will be paid for by the students on the co-operative plan.

MATERIAL FOR ROAD IN THREE MONTHS

Directors of Line to Selma
Are Cleaning Up Old
Business of Road

Officers of the Fresno-Hanford & Summit Lake Railway Company have received word from material companies that shipments can be made within the next ninety days. This is the quickest that material can be placed on the ground for the construction of the first unit of the road to Selma, and of course, under the circumstances, work cannot be started before that time. Announcement was made in the offices of the company yesterday that no orders had been placed yet, but that the contracts for material for the road would likely be closed this week.

L. H. Jones, an engineer who has purchased P. S. Granger's interest in the line and who will have the actual management of the interurban line, Saturday made a trip over the proposed route and investigated the feasibility of changing a few of the curves for the betterment of the line. Directors of the road were in session almost every day last week and are cleaning up old business. Debt of the road are being paid off in preferred stock. Over $200,000 has been voluntarily pledged toward the support of the road and the directors feel that they will have no difficulty in placing the bonds when they are ready to place them on the market.

ROBERTSON DUE BACK HERE THIS EVENING

Sends Prize Winning Exhibits From State Fair
To S. F. Land Show

Secretary William Robertson of the Fresno County Chamber of Commerce is due back tonight from Sacramento where he had charge of the exhibit from this county at the State Fair, which closed Saturday.

Robertson had expected to return yesterday, but as Fresno intends to make a creditable display at the Land Show next month in San Francisco, he waited over to pack the prize winning displays and ship them to San Francisco.

A full report will be made by him at the meeting of the board of directors Wednesday. Immediately upon his return he will take up the matter of the exhibit for the San Francisco Land Show. It is expected that Fresno can make as good a show as any other county that did at Sacramento last week during the State Fair.

Known in Valley

Funeral services for Orson B. Read, district manager for the Fraternal Brotherhood, will be held this morning at 10 o'clock from Stephens & Beall's chapel and the body will be buried in Oakland for burial. Read had been ill for about one month. He was well known in fraternal circles in the San Joaquin valley, having been the district manager for the Fraternal Brotherhood for the last six years. He came here from Los Angeles. Read died Saturday. Rev. J. A. Bachelor, supreme chaplain of the Supreme lodge and executive member of the Supreme lodge of the Fraternal Brotherhood, will officiate at the funeral. Rev. Bachelor was a close friend of the deceased. He was once pastor of the M. E. Church South in this city.

SAFE CRACKERS WILL GET HEARING TODAY

The preliminary examination of the four crackmen, charged with burglarizing Holland & Holland's store, will be held this morning at 10 o'clock before City Justice Graham, according to present indications. The hearing was held last Monday, but postponed to give the defendants time to hire Attorney Carroll Cook come to this city to defend them. The crackmen were arrested in San Francisco and lost stolen from Holland's and Kurner-Goldstein's safes was found in their possession.

THEY WERE CHEAP
An elderly lady from the country one day decided to adopt two children from the county orphan asylum.

She walked several miles before reaching the car line. It was the first time she had been in a car. She stared wide-eyed at everything she saw, then her gaze stopped on a sign, she read this:

"The Ohio Traction Company—Children, under twelve years of age three cents or two for five cents."

"Well," she said, "that is the best bargain ever. Calling the conductor of those children for five cents—right now, a boy and a girl please."—September National Monthly.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC TO AID WELLS FARGO

Fears That Reduced Rates
Will Materially Decrease
Its Revenue

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—The Southern Pacific Company, through Attorney Charles W. Durbrow, yesterday jumped to the fore in defending the Wells-Fargo Express Company from slashing rate reductions, claiming that if the rates were made effective the railway company would be made the "goat" and be required to suffer a tremendous loss.

Durbrow didn't ask the commission to grant a rehearing in the express company case, but he did ask that the commission allow judgment on the rehearing application for a short time, in order to allow the railroad to show the commission the "injustice" of its rate-cutting decision. This the commission agreed to do.

The case goes on tomorrow, when Durbrow will present the evidence that he believes will induce the commission to tone down its recent order.

The cut ordered by the state board was a drastic one, directing Wells-Fargo to rearrange its rate schedules on a basis that would bring in a net return of 10 per cent per year on its operating property. The rates so set off, which the Southern Pacific, so the express company was permitted by the commission to earn about $70,000 annually from interstate business.

The utility objected to the valuation, claiming it was much lower than it should have been. It asked for a rehearing and the Southern Pacific intervened. The railroad claims that it gets 40 per cent of the gross express receipts for its handling of Wells-Fargo intrastate business, so the reduction in rates ordered by the commission would have a corresponding effect on the Southern Pacific revenues.

In intervening on behalf of the hearing, the Southern Pacific claims, first, that the Commission has issued an order depriving the railroad of its property without due process of law; second, that the Southern Pacific is doing the express "rate-as-to-place" them on a level with freight rates actually established by the Commission.

Durbrow said should the Commission's rate schedule be made effective, the Southern Pacific's freight business will be wiped out.

"And at the same time," he said, "the demoralization of the freight business will wipe up the passenger service of the railroad to the extent that we will undoubtedly face protests from the public. The order opens a most serious situation for the express company and the railroad."

C. W. Stockton, commercial counsel for Wells Fargo, with headquarters in New York, followed Durbrow, contending that Wells Fargo should not be forced to accept a minimum return on its investment without regard to the service performed. The property return theory of ratemaking, said Stockton, was proper with some utilities, but not with an express company. He also pointed out that since the investigation into the company's rates and practices was instituted, the parcel post service has been established by the government. Because of this fact alone, he said, a rate schedule that might have been fair a year ago would not necessarily be fair at this time.

There seems to be little question of the case being stopped before reaching the United States court, unless the commission modifies its order.

The express company is fighting for its life in California, and the railroad is fighting with it. The Southern Pacific offering to lay bare the corporate relationship existing between itself and the other utility. It is this relationship that met with such rigorous criticism from the commission in its recent decision.

Charles Sing, a Chinese gardener, peddled truck in Salt Lake City. One of his best customers is a banker.

One unerring Sing drove up in solid orders for vegetables, and he found the banker working among the flowers in the yard. It was Decoration Day and the bank was closed.

"You no work today?" inquired Sing. "I should say not!" replied the banker. "This is a holiday."

"We work all same," said Sing. "We work all same every day except Sunday afternoon."

"What do you do Sunday afternoon, if you don't work?" inquired the banker.

"We wash plenty shirt last all week!" was the Chinaman's reply.—Judge.

It was at old Trinity, in Randolph County, N. C., some years ago. The class in civil engineering was progressing with a drag that was not pleasing to the old professor, who was inclined to be sarcastic, and throw out a good many marks to the chagrin of the boys. Finally he met his match in a quick-witted youth, who had been criticized by the professor, along with the rest. This boy's lesson was not perfect by any means, and the professor said to him: "When George Washington was your age he was a surveyor."

The boy came back at the professor with apologies for speaking. "And when George Washington was your age he was President of the United States."—September National Monthly.

"READY MONEY" COMING TO BARTON WEDNESDAY WITH NEW YORK CAST

ROBERT OBER AND FRANK MILLS IN A SCENE FROM "READY MONEY," AT THE BARTON NEXT WEDNESDAY EVENING.

It is generally admitted that no great success has ever been achieved by a man without some woman's aid and inspiration. And yet in the writing of the stories of the lives of the great, the woman factor is not always given the credit, doubtless due to that ever-present influence. But every day woman is getting more of the recognition she deserves. In the comedy, "Ready Money," James Montgomery has written and which William A. Brady Ltd., will present at the Barton next Wednesday evening, September 24, the real importance of the "one woman" and her influence is aptly shown. There is Stephen Baird, the young man of the comedy, who has done little with the years of his life to be proud of. There is Stephen's fiancée, Grace Tyler, and her mother, the latter declaring that her daughter will not be permitted to marry Stephen unless he changes. And Stephen does change and the activity of Stephen, being loved all the time by Grace, makes a pretty and whole comedy. The way in which the vigorous young man accomplishes his purpose affords an example to those youths who have the love of their girls but not their fiancée's parents. And the way in which Grace Tyler believes in the ability of her fiancée, is an inspiration to all these young women whose heart resolves are being daily assailed by the counter-resolves of mothers. "Ready Money" comes with a record of eight months at the New Theatre in London, eight months at the Maxine Theatre, New York. The New York cast to be seen here will include Robert Ober, "Brewster's Millions" fame; Frank Mills who played "Starford" in the Chicago run of "Hought and Paid For"; Nena Blake, last seen in musical comedy; Mary Carlisle, John C. Brownell, Clarence Rockwell, Isabelle Wynne, Adelaide Hastings and fifteen others. The seat sale opens this morning at 9 o'clock.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES

O. RED MEN.

The campaign committee of Pitkin Tribe No. 144, Improved Order of Red Men, is on the warpath and many pale faces are being dangled at their heels before many weeks. Several captures have already been made and the trembling palefaces are awaiting the arrival of the tribe which will mark their initiation into the mysterious rites of the tribe. On the committee that have assumed various names are Andrew Jensen, W. F. Leavitt and J. W. Roseman. Pitkin Tribe has met with more sick and death benefits in proportion to the time in the last two months of any period in the tribe's existence. The Harbinger's degree will be put on at a meeting on September 25th.

RUSSIAN TROUBADORS

AT PRINCESS THEATER

It is seldom that Fremans have an opportunity of witnessing entertainers from the Imperial Theater of Moscow, but such is the chance now being offered at the Princess Theater where Jasey's Royal Russian Troubadours are appearing for the first half of this week. Unlike most dances, the Russian dances are artistic interpretation of stories. The first dance is called "In the Garden" and usually follows a village wedding. While the young people are frolicking on the green a young man or woman attempts to seduce the girl. The village dancers then rush to their homes, change costumes and return to compete in dancing with the visitor. Golubow, late of the Imperial Russian ballet, interprets the part of the visitor.

Another of their dances is the Hungarian "Csardas" which is similar to the Gypsy dance of this country. The Russian balalaika, a curious instrument, is used in the act. In fact, the prima, the recorda, alto and bass of this instrument are used. The dancers are highly trained and splendidly costumed and are led by Alexander Basy, late of the Royal Opera Company where he won considerable renown in "The Bohemian Girl".

In direct contrast to the Russian dancers is White Fawn, the dusky little Indian maid. She also appears in native costume which in its way is just as gorgeous and novel as the brilliant and varied color garb of the subjects of the Czars. Her songs are appropriate and sung in a singularly sweet and youthful voice which is singularly attractive. She finishes her unique act with a peculiar Cherokee dance in full costume, including the head dress. Miss Lloyd won applause seldom accorded a soloist. This was not only because of her attractive personality, her splendid voice and her beautiful gown, but principally because of the wholeheartedness and vigor which she put into her singing. Her best number is "The melody of choruses which include "Rose Marie," "Wild Irish Rose," "When the Bands of the Desert Grow Cold," and "My Hero," from "The Chocolate Soldier".

Edward Healey strolls nonchalantly out in full dress and sings "When I Lost You," in splendid voice, tells a few stories of Irish humor which start his hearers into a fit of laughter, then lapses into child impersonations which increase his popularity and closes with a good parody. His act and his appearance are heartiness personified. Marcelle's aerial act takes from the human because of his new tricks. None of them have been seen here before and all require exceptional skill and nerve. There are three interesting reels of motion pictures to add to the pleasures of the program.

ing a quantity of stock. Winn wins the love of Mona and they are engaged. The bogus land company fails and the farmer's money is lost. Winn declares he will make good. He strikes it rich and sends him a good money. He then takes a motor boat to see Mona, but the boat is wrecked and the villagers, not yet having received their money, refuse to go to his aid. Mona gets a former sweetheart to rescue Winn. The delayed letter and the check is finally received just after the rescue and everything ends happily for all.

TEMPERAMENTAL TRAITS OF BOHEMIANISM

Is wonderfully shown in this photograph. The young face of Iris, a wealthy young financier, poses for an impressionist artist, Anatol. She falls in love with him and he, seemingly reciprocates. Despite the fact of her golden hair and baby blue eyes, the sordid atmosphere of the city appears to grow upon his nerves and he claims that he must go to the country for recuperation. Iris agrees to this rather reluctantly, but he promises to return quickly. In the far-off land of lakes and woodland charm and restful shadow, Anatol finds a modest wild flower, Marion. He persuades her to pose for him, and her artless, winsome way quite captivates him. He makes another masterpiece and a conquest. Then he decides it is time to return to the city and he promises to return soon and make her his own. He is again back amid the rush and roar of the great city. The dashing Iris again projects herself into his studio, but he greets her coldly. His infatuation for the simple country lass still claims his imagination. She is of stern stuff that does not depend, but while she is there a purchaser comes in to whom the artist shows his picture of Marion. Iris, seeing that it is another woman, when their backs are turned, cuts it into threads in a fit of fury. The artist in turn is equally furious when he discovers the spoliation. He orders her out of his studio and out of his life forever. He then writes Marion that he will soon be with her again and fix her beloved features on the canvass again. But Anatol is tickle; Iris is clever and dominating. She holds out her wealth as an incentive to atone for his poverty, her love for his life. The artist waits for him in vain. The artist and his bride go laughing on their honeymoon, while the neglected sweetheart is left to walk alone in the shadow.

PATHE SCENIC

In the Caucasus Mountains is a beautiful picture and one that will interest as well as educate, and in addition to this picture we will have a great comedy by the same producers, and one that will certainly make Mr. Gloom take a walk and allow Mr. Joy to enter into your lives.

ON WEDNESDAY A SPECIAL FIVE REEL FEATURE WILL BE SHOWN, "Satan, or the Drama of Humanity." It is without a doubt the greatest morality picture ever produced and one that will make men think. Although it is a great real feature, the price of admission will remain the same. The admission will be 10 cents to every one, children included. Wednesday and Thursday are the days that this great picture will be shown at the Fresno Photo Theater.

Pythian Sisters, next Tuesday afternoon, 10 o'clock. The business session will be followed by a card party. "50" will be the game and prizes will be awarded the lucky participants. It will be held in Odd Fellows Hall.

Special practice for the drill team of Central California Lodge, No. 243, is scheduled for next Thursday evening and a full attendance is desired.

FRATERNAL ORDER EAGLES.

At the meeting on September 20th, Fresno Aerio, F. O. E., will elect a lodge physician to take the place of the late Dr. Frank McMillan. The new doctor will begin his duties on October 1st.

UNITED WORKMEN.

At the meeting last Saturday night of Yosemite Lodge No. 171, Ancient Order of United Workmen, arrangements were made for a meeting on Saturday, October 4, at which the lodge will entertain Grand Master Workman W. J. Peterson, chief of police of Oakland, and Grand Recorder C. T. Spencer, of San Francisco. Next month a deputy will be in this city in the interests of the order.

ORDER OF OWLS.

On Tuesday evening, September 30th, Fresno Nest, Order of Owls, is planning a social session to follow the regular work.

KNIGHTS OF MACCABEES.

The regular bi-weekly meeting of Fresno Tent, K. O. T. M., will be held next Wednesday. No special work is scheduled.

INDEPENDENT FORESTERS.

The next meeting of Cone Fresno No. 763, I. O. F., will be the first of the monthly entertainments and dances to be given during the winter. In October and until further notice the third Thursday of each month has been set aside for the open meetings. The committee in charge, consisting of Brothers Weiss, Gullman and Wolfe and Companions Fontress and Richardson, have invitations for members or cards may be obtained from the financial secretary.

FRESNO REBEKAHS.

After a short business session Saturday evening which was well attended by members and visitors, Fresno Rebekah Lodge No. 155 was delightfully entertained by the excellent program prepared by Miss Homan. The following selections were excellently well rendered, and reflect great credit upon the participants: Piano solo, Alma Haines; vocal solo, "Mighty Tak a Rose," Miss Ernestine Bell; vocal duet, "The Fishes," Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Berry; violin solo, "Because," Miss Homan; Burns vocal solo, "Sing Me to Sleep," Myrtle Witham; violin obligato by Miss Homan; Burns Spanish Lullaby, Miss Homan; Spanish Lullaby, Miss Homan; Spanish Lullaby, Miss Homan.

The receipts are for the benefit of the I. O. O. F. orphan home at Gilroy, Cal. Next Saturday evening the drill team will meet for practice preparatory to conferring the Rebekah degree the first Saturday night in October. A good attendance is earnestly desired.

On the 18th of October, Mrs. Bennett, president of the Rebekah Assembly of California, will pay Fresno lodge an official visit. She will probably, during her visit, have a "school of instruction" which will be very beneficial. If the members will avail themselves of the opportunity afforded.

W. O. W.

A very interesting meeting will be held on Tuesday evening. The hostess committee is busy with the membership campaign of which Neighbor H. D. Carver is chairman. Council Commander Butcher requests that all neighbors be in attendance at the meeting of September 30, as this will be of great interest to all Woodmen. It will be a welcome to Neighbor A. E. Sunderland, head banker of the W. O. W., of which further notice will be given later.

PATIGIAN FIRST TO COMPLETE ART WORK

Fresno Sculptor Finishes Two Spondrels for the S. F. Exposition

Haig Patigian, formerly of Fresno, is the first of the San Francisco sculptors to complete the ornamental work for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, and two beautiful spondrels have this week been finished for placement over the main entrance of the exposition grounds. This is the largest structure on the grounds and the spondrels are seven feet wide and ten feet high, each with the figure of a muscular man of strong physique in a slitting posture and engaged in tasks with machines of implements of industry. Drills, anvils, gearing, pulleys, hammers and boring machines surround him, and the heroic figures are executed with the Patigian skill, that which brought him fame in Europe as well as home, his first effort, "Ancient History," being exhibited in the Paris Salon and bringing him at once into general notice.

NOTE THE CHANGE IN THIRTY DAYS BRIGHT'S DISEASE

On Aug. 22nd, 1913, W. T. Delaporte, 1234 Hubbard St., Jacksonville, Fla., writes discouragingly: "I had Bright's disease, and was suffering greatly with dropsy and had taken two bottles of Fulton's Renal Compound without results and was greatly disappointed."

A prescription containing Apocynum, Chinomathus, Peptizyme, etc., was sent to add the Renal Compound.

On Sept. 11th patient writes that the dropsy is leaving rapidly, he is sleeping well, eliminations are again free and he is making such a fine recovery that he says if we will write a testimonial he will sign it. We thanked him, but replied we had so many testimonials we would not trouble him.

But what about the results Fulton's Renal Compound is getting in these cases of Bright's disease, supposed to be hopeless?

MAY HE KICK BACK

It seems doubtful whether Governor Sulzer of New York, by the testimony in his behalf which it is announced that he and Mrs. Sulzer will present on giving, can entirely clear himself of the charges against him, and possibly this is not his intention or motive. Apparently Sulzer has been "taught with a good on him," as to at least some of the charges, and his permanent retirement from politics, either by direct conviction, or by being so discredited as to destroy his usefulness, is inevitable.

But it is nevertheless highly desirable that the testimony be given, and it may serve a purpose even more important than the vindication of Sulzer. Sulzer is presumably guilty of some things, but nobody supposes that this is the reason he is being prosecuted, or that his accusers care whether he is guilty or not. A little thing like grafting on the campaign fund does not worry Tammany, whose whole existence depends on the continuous commission of the same crime by itself. If Sulzer had done his grafting on Tammany's side and in its interest, he might have taken ten times as much and Tammany would have been glad to help him get it. His crime, from the Tammany standpoint, was insubordination, and the exposure of his grafting is a mere incidental means of "getting" him, in revenge for not standing in. It is the same use that is made of the ex-convicts in New York. Every saloonkeeper is supposed to violate those laws, and they are, in fact, intended to be made so that no saloonkeeper can survive in the competition without violating them. Their purpose is not to regulate the saloon business, but to serve as a club, to punish the saloonkeeper who does not do Tammany politics and obey Tammany orders. On such a man, the law is enforced, and the law is intended to be such that, if he is caught, he is to obey it, it will break him. In the larger things, Tammany assumes that everybody will graft, but the graft laws are enforced merely as a punishment on those who kick over the traces.

Unquestionably, before Sulzer revolted, pressure was brought to bear on him of a sort that it will be very useful to have made public. Now, those who execute that pressure have ruined Sulzer, which is a pity, since, in fighting them he was accomplishing a good result. But if, in going down, he had dragged them down to ruin too, that will be an incalculable boon. If, as a sort of Arnold Winkelried, Sulzer, in drawing the spears by his own breast, can make the breach through which Tammany may be overwhelmed, it may not be creditable to him, since what he has sacrificed is not mere life, but character—but it will help clear New York of a greater evil than all the grafts that Tammany can ever fling back at Sulzer.

NON-PARTISAN

The Ironclad club of San Francisco has declined to make any endorsement of candidates for nominations at the coming city election, on the ground that it has always favored the non-partisan provisions of the charter, and that "the indiscriminate endorsing of candidates for public office by partisan political organizations has a tendency to nullify and in a measure to destroy" the purpose of the primary law. It might have been added that it tends to nullify and therefore to destroy even the partisan endorsements themselves. When every candidate is seeking both the Republican and the Democratic endorsements, and non-partisan endorsements too, and the successful candidates are largely those who have received all three, and who would have been as easily elected without none, the partisan character of the endorsements disappears, and there ceases to be any reason for making them. There is no partisan Republican reason why a partisan Republican should vote for the candidate with a Republican endorsement, if he has also received the Democratic endorsement, and is actually running as an independent. Bi-partisan endorsements become thus non-partisan, and have no party weight, nor, indeed, any weight, except what may be given them by the personal influence of the particular committeemen making the endorsement. And if these committeemen have any such non-partisan influence, they would much better exercise it through non-partisan channels. In San Francisco, in fact, they mostly haven't.

This idea of partisan endorsement of city candidates dies harder in San Francisco than anywhere else, largely because San Francisco has always had the curious custom of expecting the local party committees to endorse candidates. Even under the old convention system, the party committee usually went into the convention quite openly with a ticket of its own, which could only be defeated for nomination by anti-organization insurgency in the convention. When the direct primary was adopted, the San Francisco party committees still maintained the tradition of presenting an endorsed ticket to the party voters. So, quite naturally, they still present non-partisan or bi-partisan endorsements to the non-partisan primaries. Everywhere else, under the convention system, the party committee was supposed to remain neutral until the convention had chosen the candidates, and then to work for the election of those candidates. The same tradition continued into the party primaries, and, naturally, in the non-partisan primaries, the whole function of party conventions simply ceased to exist, and their existence was forgotten. By reason of a different tradition in San Francisco, their elimination is slower and harder, but it will arrive there, also.

For the rest of the state the question has now acquired a new importance by virtue of the introduction of the non-partisan primary into the long partisan county offices. In city elections, party lines have so far disappeared that most people have forgotten that they ever existed. The same thing will come about ultimately in county affairs. If party organizations will accept the new law in good faith, it will take only one election to eliminate the whole consciousness of parties. If they resist, it may take two or three elections, as it has in San Francisco. At the first election, even without party endorsements, some people will still vote for party reasons, simply from force of old habit. But if the party committees will keep out of the game, one election will destroy the habit—in Fresno county; for instance, everybody who knows anything at all about the county government knows that the Board of Supervisors and many of the county officials are Democrats, because they were elected that way. But in Fresno city, probably not a dozen persons in the whole city could tell whether the majority of the present trustees are Republicans, Democrats or Progressives, and nobody cares. Nobody will know, nor care, with regard to the county government, after we have once thoroughly tried out the new system. But to try it right, and to make the transition in one election, instead of two, there must be no attempt, direct or indirect, to give any candidates for nomination the weight of any sort of endorsement by the local organizations of state or national parties. If there must be organizations or endorsements, let them be, as they now are in most cities, extemporized for the purpose regardless of national or state party lines. And if parties or factions must develop, let them be county parties, and not county representatives of state or national parties.

EXPOSITION FIRES

The burning of one of the exposition buildings at Ghent the other day is a reminder of the difference between the way the fire problem is handled in European expositions and in the plans for the exposition at San Francisco. All expositions are in danger of fire. It is impossible within a limit of practicable cost, in money and time, to erect fireproof buildings on so huge a scale, as that called for by exposition conditions. Therefore most expositions have ultimately disappeared by way of fire, and the fortunate ones were those in which the conflagration did not come until after the exposition had closed and the principal exhibits were out. Except in one respect the same condition obtains in San Francisco. The machinery palace, for instance, whose structure has just been completed, leaving only a portion of the finishing still to do, is the largest wooden building in the world. It is a mile around and is nearly all in one room. If it were set afire and let alone it would make the most spectacular conflagration in the world. But the difference between America and Europe is that while our buildings may catch fire they will not be suffered to burn down. European cities are built so nearly fire-resistant that European fire departments are wholly inadequate to cope with great fire risks, such as those presented by an exposition. Fire-fighting in America has been developed to a fine art by virtue of the extremely inflammable character of our cities. The exposition at San Francisco will be protected by fire-fighting precautions abreast of the absolute maximum of modern American efficiency. Automatic sprinkler systems, high-pressure pipes, with faucets, hose and water towers everywhere, a vigilant fire patrol and a prompt and efficient fire department will mean that every fire is to be put out almost before it starts. As to cities, it is probably not the best way, but as to expositions it is the only way, and America is the only place in which it can be applied.

Patrolman Frank Frydrychowicz figures in a recent news dispatch from Milwaukee. Evidently the race that made Milwaukee famous no longer constitutes the entire population of Pabstschitzville.

Exploiting Mexico.

One of the current ideas of the times, taken for granted by most people, is that a man has a right to go into a half civilized country in order to make money by speculative investments, and that, if political conditions in that country interfere with his money making, he has the right to involve his own nation in war to protect his so-called interests, thus forcing his countrymen to interrupt their useful activities, and spend their money and their blood, and brutalize their civilization, for the sake of looking after his dividends. This is not President Wilson's view. His conduct of the Mexican situation has been remarkable for patience, and for a firm but tactful adherence to those general principles by which his whole life and thought are guided. As he has stated publicly, he wishes to act "not in the interest of any person or body of persons who may have personal or property claim in Mexico." Those foreign newspapers which have been calling his policy in Mexico "materialism," may imagine that their own conduct of Balkan affairs and other complications in Europe and Asia is professional; but they will have hard work to convince enlightened Americans that professionalism of that sort is superior to amateurism of the kind that President Wilson is exhibiting.—Harpor's Weekly.

The WORLD'S MYSTERIES

WHAT BECAME OF JEAN LAFITTE?

The name of Jean Lafitte is more or less unfamiliar to most of the average reader, and this is due principally to the mystery that surrounded the man, for no one knew from whence he came or what became of him. Lafitte was the founder of Galveston, Texas, and when the government captured that place in 1820 he sailed away with a well-laden treasure ship and no one ever heard of him thereafter.

As his name would indicate, Lafitte was a Frenchman, and was well known in the extreme south for a dozen years during the first part of the last century. He first attracted attention when he and his brother Pierre, opened a blacksmith shop in New Orleans. This was more or less of a blind, for neither of them looked the part of the "blacksmith." They prospered, however, for they got several colored men to do the hard work of the business, while they looked after and managed bigger enterprises.

It was not long, however, until Jean's real occupation became known. He was a pirate who would frequently sail forth under cover into the Gulf of Mexico, and return in no way empty handed. The authorities began to look upon him with suspicion, but fortunately for him the war with England broke out and he turned his good resources to valuable account with advantage to the United States.

History is slightly contradictory regarding the two brothers, for some say that it was Pierre Lafitte who sailed into the Gulf, and that Jean ended his days in luxury in Yucatan, but most of them are sure that it was Jean who disappeared so mysteriously.

At any rate, historians agree that the brothers made their vast wealth by slave smuggling; or to be more exact, by a slave trade between Africa and America. During the first ten years of the last century Louisiana was a vast territory of rich, unsettled land, to which the pioneer hastened to find his Eldorado. Thousands of slaves were needed to work these plantations, and the Lafitte brothers were just clever enough to know how to get them and make a vast profit. It was possible to purchase a colored man in Africa for ninety dollars, and he could easily be disposed of in the Louisiana planter for $1000 on the New Orleans market. By the time the United States became fully cognizant of the illegal practice and made laws to prevent it, Jean and Pierre Lafitte had accumulated a vast fortune for those days.

But the Lafittes were not to be thwarted by any laws, so realizing that it would be unsafe for them to export slaves, they hit upon a new idea. It would be economy for them to seize the Spanish slave-ships off the Cuban coast and take the slaves, thereby getting them without cost.

Jean did not go himself after such piratical work, for he was a "business man," but instead he gathered about him 1000 men, whom he had trained in his employ, and with sufficient money to purchase several ships; he stayed home, acting the "gentleman," while this small army of employees worked out the solutions he had planned.

In order to successfully carry on the work he had a fortified town and harbor of his own at Batavia, and it was here he made his headquarters. He was a man of a peculiar temperament. He held himself aloof from all his men and rarely spoke to them. The pirates disliked him to the extent that he hid his back by calling him "the old man," but in his face he was "Boss," a word which literally meant "prominence," and it was the origin of our English word "Boss." The government finally became cognizant of the illegitimate business Jean Lafitte was conducting, but again he was clever, for by judiciously having his men managed for a long time to keep out of the hands of the law.

When the British, in 1812, undertook the capture of New Orleans, they offered Jean Lafitte a large sum of money for his assistance and that of his men; but instead of accepting he turned his back on the British plan and offered them his service. Andrew Jackson accepted his offer and the pirate fought bravely for America, and the British, in revenge, destroyed his Batavia plantation and seized his ships.

The United States government, in appreciation of his assistance, pardoned him for all the crimes he had committed, and when the war was over he went back again to his old parents, settling on the land now occupied by the city of Galveston, Texas. Finally he became so addicted to his life of piracy that he was compelled to capture his enemy, but Lafitte escaped, and nothing was ever heard of him afterwards, but several of his followers were hanged to break up the illegitimate practices. Tomorrow — Was "Monte Christo" based on true story?

Frank Coleman, 2025 Ventura Ave., Fresno, Cal., says: "I had La Grippe in 1905, and it left my kidneys in bad shape. I doctored and succeeded in getting rid of the attack, but the following spring the trouble returned. I was told if I went to a warmer climate the trouble would leave. I did, but it made no difference. I endured untold agony from pains in my back and intense headaches. The loss of rest and the misery I endured made me feel that there was no hope for me. One treatment after another failed until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, that I got at the Baker & Colson Drug Co. They benefited me in a short time and before long drove away every symptom of kidney trouble. I take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally now and then, and they 'keep' my kidneys working right. What I said about Doan's Kidney Pills in the testimonial I gave several years ago still holds good."

KERMAN HIGH SCHOOL SHOWS RAPID GROWTH

Enrollment Has Gained 60 Per Cent; Pupils' New Branches Popular

KERMAN, Sept. 21.—The Kerman Union High school closed yesterday at the end of the first week of its fourth year with forty-two pupils enrolled, a gain of sixty per cent over the average attendance last year. Mr. W. Broecker, who is serving his first year as principal, expects that the enrollment will approximate fifty by the end of next week.

At present eight are enrolled in the commercial department of the school, established this year while the demand for domestic science, another new course, has been greater than the school could accommodate. Five are enrolled in the agriculture course. The growth apparent at the high school is reflected in the grammar schools, all of which report an increase over last year with the exception of the Dubuque district, where the enrollment has fallen as the result of district reorganization. Two teachers were employed last year but this year one takes care of thirty pupils registered.

IS GIVEN 90 DAYS FOR BLINDPIGGING

Traver Man Is Arraigned Before Judge Whom He Knew When He Was Abolitionist; Gets Advice

TULARE, Sept. 21.—William Weisner, well known in this city, but residing in Traver for some time, was brought before Judge DeWitt yesterday morning on a complaint of selling liquor against the state law. The complaint was sworn to by Chas. Mitchell of Traver, to whom he sold the liquor. Weisner pleaded guilty to the charge and was given 90 days in the county jail.

Weisner and Judge DeWitt were old friends, and the Judge endeavored to have the complaint filed in some other court, but District Attorney Lamberth saw fit to file it here. Before passing judgment Judge DeWitt told Weisner that he was very sorry to have seen him a drunkard and charged with selling liquor. He told Weisner that when he first knew him he was a total abstainer. Now he was a drunkard and in the toils of the law. He straightened up, telling him that the 90 days in the county jail would give him a good start.

Weisner seemed much affected by the Judge's lecture and promised faithfully to keep straight in the future.

SAYS CLOVIS FRUIT IS EQUAL TO ANY

Heinrich Haas, Well Known Fruit Man, Pays Visit To This County

CLOVIS, Sept. 21.—Few residents of Fresno county realize that the fruit produced from this comparatively small district is consumed by all races far across the two oceans. Hundreds of tons of Clovis dried peaches, apricots and figs were brought this week by Heinrich Haas, of this county, to Hamburg, Germany, to be packed in large packing company, whom Haas represents, into the fruit through a certain process and repacks it for the trade of the Orient.

Haas is president of the Santa Produce company of San Jose. Not only does he reap from the harvest of the Santa Clara valley, but from the Santa Clara as well. From San Francisco he exports his dried fruit business to Germany. Haas plans from the California districts all over the world, figs and raisins. Spain, Italy, Portugal, France, and Peru—contribute figs, dates, raisins and apricots.

In comparing the Clovis district with others, which this foreign buyer has seen in the course of his world travels, he says that the Clovis district from Garfield to Fresno excels in natural fertility and beauty that of any fruit district visited by him.

Haas expects to spend October in Spain and Italy, from whence he will journey in search of tropical fruits in Asia Minor.

NORMAL GRADUATES TEACH IN CLOVIS

Six of the Nine Teachers Are From the Fresno School; Attendance Shows Good Increase

CLOVIS, Sept. 21.—The Clovis grammar school opened the 15th with a complete faculty of nine teachers, who have commenced the instruction of the young with no hindrance or delay. Six of the nine teachers are new, most of them having graduated from the Fresno Normal this year. The registration shows an increase in enrollment of 35 pupils over last fall's enrollment. Sixty representing the total number who applied for admittance during the first week. The new class, composed of the little ones of six or thereabouts, is exceptionally large. It would be a great addition to the school if a kindergarten department could be established as it is being done in many schools throughout the east. The regular primary and grammar school course of study is pursued with the excellent addition of agriculture, a most practical requirement for this vicinity; hygiene, an absolute essential in all schools and districts, and music under the personal direction of Prof. John T. Lyons, recently of the Fresno Normal, to establish a department in the near future. Training and also to make it possible to allot certain hours a week for the upper class girls to attend the cooking and sewing lessons in the well-equipped domestic science department of the high school.

The grading of the pupils has been adjusted which now permits mid-term examinations. This system makes it possible to accommodate twice the number of pupils which are in attendance at present.

Two large, comfortable buildings and two outdoor school rooms prettily situated in a clump of umbrellas, palm and eucalyptus trees and surrounded by a thick border of brilliant red soil, comprise the Clovis city school. A deep well and tank house, completely covered, afford the best water for the growing citizens of future Clovis.

There are 13 smaller schools, well equipped and artistic of architecture scattered throughout the district.

KINGSBURG JOTTINGS

KINGSBURG, Sept. 21.—Today is a day of sadness and funerals in Kingsburg, there being no less than three funerals here today. They are those of Olaf Anderson, Miss Helah Borg, and Miss Johnson, a thirteen-year-old girl.

The ordinance has been published providing for a sewer bond election to take place Saturday, October 4. The amount of bonds to be voted on is $25,000. Although it requires a two-thirds vote to carry for a sewer system, there seems to be little or no opposition so far, and it is confidently expected that the bonds will carry. Frank A. Lathrop, who planned the proposed system, will be here on the 25th and on that evening a meeting of citizens will be held at the city hall at which time the sewer question will be thoroughly discussed, and Lathrop will answer all questions that may be asked concerning the same.

Angel Johnson, of Fresno, made a flying visit to relatives and friends in Kingsburg today.

The social at the Fraternal Hall Friday evening was a most enjoyable affair, and a marked success. As a result of it, the ladies of the South M. E. church turned over $15.00, the ladies of the Methodist church $10.00, and the Women's Improvement club a large portion of the Madera display. The most striking example of the productiveness of the mountain soil is a stalk of popcorn which reached high and holding several well-stocked ears of corn. Besides, they exhibit some remarkable red clover and other varieties of field crops.

This is the first year that Madera has exhibited at the State Fair and it has made a creditable showing. Malloy came to this state from Iowa, has been in California several years. Besides the householders' exhibits, Malloy has on display the valley products of the county. A prominent feature is a replica of the county's typical irrigation system. A slab of fine granite, quarried in the foothills and weighing about 100 pounds, presents a striking appearance.

Malloy exhibits almonds, dried fruits and grapes of all kinds, alfalfa, clover and several jar specimens of the soils of the county—Sacramento River.

Dr. W. J. Buckland, who has been in Kingsburg, where he has a post graduate course. The family is occupying the Wilton house, now owned by S. A. Ross. The doctor will resume the practice of medicine here.

Mr. W. L. Neukirch is at the bedside of a sister at Sacramento who has been very ill, but is recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sherrill were passengers for Fresno today.

John Sawyer has opened a barber shop in the corner room. This gives Kingsburg three shops. Inside and outside finishing is being rushed at the new First National bank building, and the new fixtures are being installed. When completed, this will be one of the finest and most convenient banking buildings in the valley. The building, which will cost in the neighborhood of $20,000, about October 15. It will be finished on the outside in white pebble dash and is of re-inforced concrete.

The office and resident block being constructed by Drs. Thos. D. and Fred Smith, which is now nearing completion, will be one of the most modern and most convenient for its purposes to be found anywhere. This building will be about 45x50 feet in dimensions, two stories in height, and will be finished on the outside in white pebble dash, being of re-inforced concrete. On the first floor will be two suites of office rooms, one suite to be occupied by Dr. and Mrs. Smith, and the other by Dr. Smith. At the rear will be a living room. Upstairs will be the living room of Dr. and Mrs. Smith, which may later be converted to hospital purposes. This fine building will soon be ready for occupancy.

With the acquisition by the Associated Packing Company of the Phoenix Packing Company's plant here, and the control of the C. F. C. plant, a corrugated galvanized iron building, practically fire proof, where seedlings will be stored; and with the proposed new warehouse by the Associated, Kingsburg begins to feel that she is on the map in retail matters, and ready to come into her own.

The postoffice department has posted notices calling for bids for new quarters for the postoffice. The present quarters not being of sufficient size to meet Uncle Sam's requirements. Sealed proposals will be received for the balance of the month.

Preparations continue, both for the agricultural and women's displays at the Fresno District Fair, and Kingsburg will be on the map there also, whether she wins any prizes or not.

Mr. Haynes, our street contractor, has been exhibiting and demonstrating his Universal Road Machine at the State Fair at Sacramento the past week.

RIVERDALE STUDENTS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Organization Is Perfected For Year; Work To Begin on Addition; Notes

RIVERDALE, Sept. 21.—The classes in the high school organized this week by electing officers appointing committees and getting ready for social and other activities. The Sophomore and Junior organizations were organized and elected as follows: President, Leon Cuddaback; vice-president, Milo Haynes; secretary-treasurer, Jewel Craig. Some discussion was given to class motto, colors and flower, but the matter was postponed until next meeting.

Messrs. Dr. Baum and Johanne have been giving their new house a coat of paint this week.

All the teachers of the grammar school were present on Monday and the school started in with good enrollment, though not so large as was expected.

The carpenters have the new tank house, which is also a bicycle shed, nearly completed. This tank will supply water for the school and also for the new sewerage and toilet system to be installed throughout the building. It is expected that the carpenters will be at work on the new addition some time next week.

The Purple and White Box Social given on the library grounds by the ladies of the Missionary Society on Friday evening was well attended and was quite a success both socially and financially.

The program began with a cluster of old time songs. Those that are true and tried and that everybody loves, given by a chorus of Riverdale singers. "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "Where the River Shantah flows," "Silver Bells," "Out on Your Own," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Auntie Laurie." These were well rendered and very much enjoyed.

The social was given by the Reverend Bro. Parks.

Then followed a solo, "A Jolly Good Fellow," by Miss Verla Smelter; recitation, by Mr. Husom; solo, "I've Grown So Used to You," by Miss Beatrice Smelter; recitation, "Alkali Pete," by Carl Parker; recitation, Miss Malberry, solo, "Out on the Deep," Mrs. Parks; recitation, "Little May and I," Mabel Whorton. Their boxes adorned with pink and white in many tasteful and artistic designs were sold. They all proved to be full of good things furnishing a feast which was well enjoyed by all.

Exhibit Shows That Madera Is Versatile

The man with the pioneer instinct who wishes to succeed in the mountains will find in the Madera county display at the State Fair, in charge of W. C. Malloy, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, an example of what can be done by the homesteader. The homesteader's exhibit in the mountains of Madera have supplied a large portion of the Madera display. The most striking example of the productiveness of the mountain soil is a stalk of popcorn which reached high and holding several well-stocked ears of corn. Besides, they exhibit some remarkable red clover and other varieties of field crops.

This is the first year that Madera has exhibited at the State Fair and it has made a creditable showing. Malloy came to this state from Iowa, has been in California several years.

Besides the householders' exhibits, Malloy has on display the valley products of the county. A prominent feature is a replica of the county's typical irrigation system. A slab of fine granite, quarried in the foothills and weighing about 100 pounds, presents a striking appearance.

Malloy exhibits almonds, dried fruits and grapes of all kinds, alfalfa, clover and several jar specimens of the soils of the county—Sacramento River.

A number of personal friends of Rev. Martin Miller attended his funeral at Reedley Friday morning.

Rev. Byrd and wife attended the ministers meeting Thursday at Fresno.

Mrs. E. Russell is reported as improving in health.

The grammar school trustees are having benches made for the school yard.

Henry Messing has resigned his position with Hayhursts.

Dr. Charles Traber has accepted a position in the hospital at Big Creek. His wife and little daughter will follow later.

J. E. Schofield was a Fresno visitor this week.

JACKSON FAILS TO BREAK LONG HIT RECORD

Dan Brouthers Credited
With Driving Ball 1300
Feet In 1894

Clevelanders Poles Hit To
Top of Grandstand Wing
On Polo Grounds

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—From all the evidence submitted in the case, it was decided here today that Joe Jackson, the slugging outfielder of the Cleveland club, will not, among other things this season, be credited with making the longest hit in the history of the game. When the Naps were playing at the Polo Grounds recently Jackson poked a hit to the top of the right wing of the grandstand, and it was claimed that it was the longest hit ever made in the game on record. The hit might have put into the books a record had it not been for a number of old-time fans and ball players with their recollections of events that occurred back in the dark ages of the pastime. They pulled from the multi-volume records the achievements of Dan Brouthers back in 1894 to show that Jackson was not even in the running for the long distance hitting championship.

BROUTHERS HOLDS RECORD
Brothers, who at the time he wrote this record in the books was a member of the famous Baltimore Orioles and a teammate of John McGraw, Dick Robinson, Hughie Jennings and several other famous athletes of that time, hit a ball 1300 feet. That is, the ball traveled that far before it stopped rolling. That is at least a city block further than Jackson's hit, which was a long, low, swift, flat hit—not a fly. The ball traveled two-and-a-half city blocks, bounding and rolling, and these measure on a city square more than 800 feet.

"Brothers' hit stands in the records, and there is one told of by baseball men that makes it look like a pop fly. According to this story a player in the old National league grounds at Boston hit a ball over the left field fence in a game one day. The ball rolled tracks are just outside of the fence. The ball fell into the coal tender of a passing train, and the Philadelphia and went all the way to Quaker City before it stopped. That is generally credited with being some hit.

GIANTS AND ATHLETICS NEARING TO PENNANT

Leaders of American and National Leagues Have Honors Within Grasp

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Only a matter of mathematical possibilities now stands between the Giants and Athletics and the pennants in their respective leagues. Tomorrow may see which of the two clubs will get the point which will give them the flag, even if they lose all their remaining games. Not many days afterward the players under John McGraw's tutelage should find themselves in a similar position.

The Cleveland-Washington battle for second place in the American league is still keen interest. Griffith's men have won out of their last fourteen games, while the Athletics have taken but three out of twelve and still are going poorly.

Chicago and Boston are only about three games apart, and fourth position looks to be a battle between them. Speaker's batting performances are being closely watched.

The Philadelphia Nationals, even though they have failed to maintain a steady pace, to bring them to the flag winning point, are not threatened for second place.

Pittsburg seems settled in fourth place, but Brooklyn and Boston are having a hard struggle to decide who shall head the series division.

Cincinnati, which has been playing at considerably better than a .500 clip recently, has a fighting chance to beat out either Boston or Brooklyn.

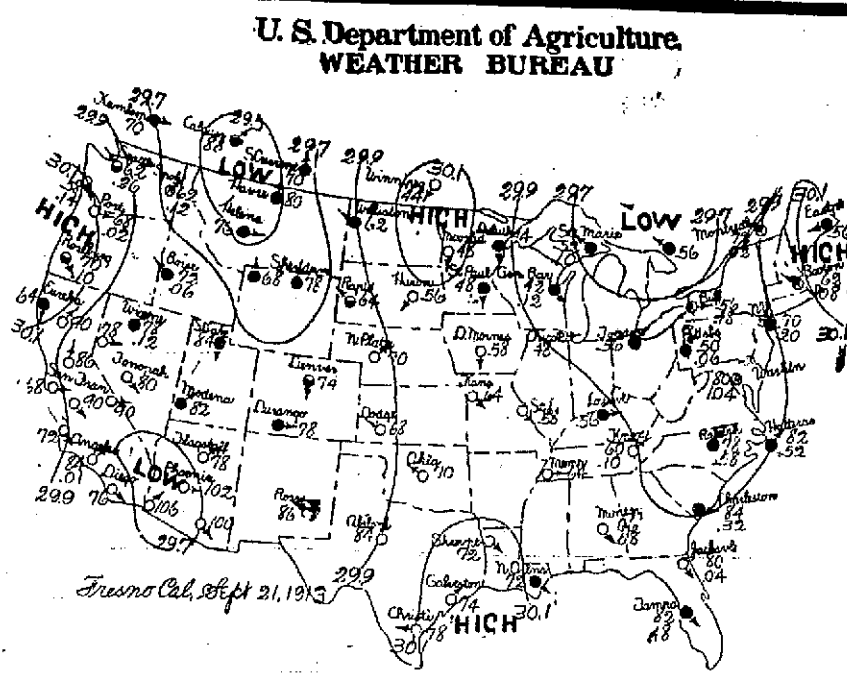

St. Louis is hopelessly mired in the last berth.

"There will be no one from present appearance to dispute the place with the Cubs, who will therefore have them happen to rise a degree by keeping up their spirit of today and making out the Phillies finish under them in the same notch."

RE-UNION IS HELD BY TULARE CROWD

TULARE, Sept. 21.—A number of young people gathered at the home of Mrs. A. W. Cobb Thursday at an informal dance. The gathering was a sort of re-union. The old friends of the younger members of the family, who are soon to depart for the year, Jesse and Wilbur Cobb both commenced their second year at college. Mrs. H. H. Scott, formerly of Cobb, will leave the first of next week for her home in Salem, Oregon. The in singing and playing games, past days when they were all school boys and girls together. Light refreshments were served and all report old school days as a regular event. The following young people were present: Misses Alice Gamble, Ida Moore, Jessie Scott, Edna Wilson, Rhyne Slaughter, Ella Hopkins, Bertha Hopkins, Rhonda A. T. Ward, Frank Hopkins, Horman Stetler, Joe and Wilbur Cobb, Mrs. H. H. Scott and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Cobb.

FOUR NEW POWER PLANT FOR KERN
Secretary of Agriculture
Issues Permits For Further Development

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 21.—Secretary of Agriculture Houston to plant signed a permit to the Southern California Edison Company for extension of power development of water power house at Kern River basin, Kern National Forest.

The development will consist of four power plants of the most modern construction, with conduit lines entirely in tunnel. These developments will be similar to the Kern River No. 1 plant which has been operated for several years past by the same company at a lower point on the river.

Plant No. 5 will divert its water at the outlet of Kern lake, and the power house will be located just below the mouth of Little Kern River. The discharge from this plant will immediately be diverted to the conduit of Plant No. 4; power house No. 4 will be on the west bank of the river at the mouth of Brush Creek. The intake of Plant No. 3 will be but a short distance below power house No. 3 will be approximately six miles above Kernville, from the San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation. The intake of Plant No. 2 will be at the mouth of the Kern River, there is very little drift on the river and therefore no chance for power development. Plant No. 2 will divert its water supply a short distance below the mouth of the Kern River No. 1 belonging to the Southern California Edison Company.

Even during the lowest water of the recent years Plant No. 5 will develop over 33,000 h. p. Plant No. 4, 5,000; Plant No. 3, 8,000; and Plant No. 2, 2,500. The power available at all plants during the average year of flow will, of course, be far larger than the above amounts.

Just below the present Kern River plant No. 1 the waters of the river are diverted into a tunnel of the Canyon Power Corporation. The San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation, at the mouth of Kern River, has completed the water power developments at the mouth of the Kern River, there is very little drift on the river and therefore no chance for power development. Plant No. 2 will divert its water supply a short distance below the mouth of the Kern River No. 1 belonging to the Southern California Edison Company.

Even during the lowest water of the recent years Plant No. 5 will develop over 33,000 h. p. Plant No. 4, 5,000; Plant No. 3, 8,000; and Plant No. 2, 2,500. The power available at all plants during the average year of flow will, of course, be far larger than the above amounts.

A Page of Interesting Short Stories

BY RIGHT

BY WILL SEAT.

ADGB heard Mrs. Peck go heavily up and down the three long flights of stairs twice before she felt moved to definite personal action.

It must be the middle of the night, she thought. A sleep watch under her pillow showed it was 2:15. Madge stole out of bed and groped, by the glimmer of the one turned-down gas jet, for slippers and bathrobe.

"O Mrs. Peck," she said softly, opening her door about three inches, as the steps approached halting distance.

"Yes, Miss Hadley. Don't be disturbed, child," breathed Mrs. Peck in a hoarse whisper. She bore a hot-water bag in one hand and some bottles in the other. "It's just Mr. Griffin in the back. He's been taken bad."

Madge hesitated. She had never even spoken to Mr. Griffin, but he was her neighbor on the fourth floor, and even such proximity breeds a certain unexpressed fraternity in a boarding house. It is a communal spirit of misfortune, if nothing else.

"Do let me help you, please, Mrs. Peck," she begged, "I'm a good nurse."

Mrs. Peck hesitated. Madge's dark eyes were eloquent, and it was a long climb down to the basement.

"Well, you can get the hot water up and then you might ring the bell in the morning. It's a bad cold, and he's out of his head," Mrs. Knapp heard him raving, and she was scared stiff, but when it came to her what it was, she slipped down and got me up. The poor boy's all alone, you know."

"I didn't know," said Madge, hurriedly, sorry she had never encouraged Mr. Griffin's half apologetic greetings. Merely a little bow of the head would he get as he hurried by him on the way to breakfast or dinner.

But now it was just as if she were back home in Finland, where neighborliness brooded over the whole sleepy little Southern town.

She thought as she ran downstairs how her mother and Winnie would have done everything that lay in their power for a "poor boy all alone." How her mother would have taken the captivity away from Mrs. Peck gently, but with authority, and have brooded over the sick one with all the sweet motherliness of her nature.

And after all, Madge thought the spirit was just the same, whether it was Finland or West 21st street, Manhattan. Her neighbor lay ill. As her mother's daughter and Virginia's daughter likewise, she felt it her privilege to give help and succor at this hour.

So she found her way down to Mrs. Peck's basement kitchen, and turned on the gas. There was no fire in the range. She laid her hand on the hot water bottle; it was cold.

Over in one corner she found a little two-burner gas stove where Mrs. Peck had just been heating some water for the rubber bag, and she filled the teakettle and set it on to heat.

The telephone was out in the hallway, and she had forgotten to ask Mrs. Peck which doctor to call. Ben would come in a minute if she asked him. She knew he would, and he was a good doctor.

"Ben, it's Madge," she called. "Could you come right down here? There's one of the gentlemen in the house who is very ill. They asked me to call a doctor."

Ben suggested a doctor-nearer to 22d street. He knew of several.

"O, of course, if you'd rather not," Madge's tone was ominous.

"I'll be right down, dear," he assured her.

So it happened that when Gadsby Griffin opened his eyes from the first stupor of pneumonia, he saw Madge standing over him. This was quite natural. He had seen her there through all his dream mazes.

Even before the cold gripped him, he had sometimes closed his eyes, and tried to picture her face against the night's darkness. Now she was there and he felt her hand laid on his brow.

"He seems awfully feverish, Ben," she was saying to the rather stocky, smooth-faced young fellow putting over Griffin's work table by the window, Griffin wondered vaguely if he was disarranging any of the papers there.

"He may be for a few hours more, probably several days. He breathes easier, keep that smoky furnace heat turned off, and the windows open, mind. I'll be in again about 11. Going to stick by?"

"Until noon," said Madge. "I have to go up to class work then. I suppose I could give it up today if he is very ill."

Griffin wished she would put her hand a little bit lower, near his lips, but she gave him a piece of ice instead.

"I'M NOT WEAK," RETORTED GAD.

stead, and his eyelids felt too heavy to raise.

After the fellow she called Ben had gone, he heard her talking with Mrs. Peck at the door. Mrs. Peck wanted to know whether the doctor thought they had better send him to the hospital.

He was a fine boy, and his board was paid right up till Monday night, but she'd had one die on her hands and she didn't want it to happen that way again. Humility was all right, and nobody could start she was hard-hearted, but she had her work to do, and who was to watch Mr. Griffin that he didn't take a bad spell and jump the window the way some of them did.

"I'll stay with him," said Madge. "Don't send him away to the hospital."

Then Griffin felt himself drifting away again into that formless, shoreless sea of gray dreams, but the vivid held the memory of her voice now, so it was a void no longer.

He gasped at that cheerful young tone and the promise it held for him. It gave him queer, subconscious strength, the knowledge that she was there and would not leave him. He never questioned why. It seemed over and over, as he slipped away into unconsciousness he would feel her strong young hands clasp over his, and hear her voice in his ear.

"Fight, fight against it. Can't you hear me? You mustn't give up. Fight, O, please fight."

He didn't know that Madge was alone at these times, that she knelt by the bed, with tears in her eyes, trying with all her will power to compel him to resist.

"I think we're winning," Ben said that last night. "He's a strong lad. I'll bet one of Aunt Alice's best fruit cookies, he's born and raised in the country with that constitution and frame. He's made of oak."

"I heard him say once he was from the country," Mrs. Peck replied. "Ain't he sleeping fine now, the dear lad?"

Wonder are those letters from his home folks, always getting letters from Portland, Me. I think they're from his wife."

Madge started. His wife. Why, she had never even considered such a possible person. Was there a wife somewhere, another woman who should have been in her place all those weary hours?

Mrs. Peck had gone down, and Ben turned and saw the look in her eyes. He put one arm around her shoulders and drew her over to him.

"Poor kiddie, you're all played out, aren't you?"

"That's the worst of us Virginians. We'll give every last ounce of strength for the stranger within the gate, eh? I've grown to have an interest in the boy myself even, Glad he'll pull through. He owes his life to you, Madge."

Gadsby opened his eyes tiredly, and saw the two figures, Madge was crying softly—more from overtaxed nerves, and relief at his chance for recovery. But Gadsby did not know. After Ben had gone he groaned.

"Did you want anything, Mr. Griffin?" asked Madge, very impersonally and gently. "You mustn't overstrain yourself, but there are letters from home. Would you like them?"

"I haven't overstrained," said Gadsby, frostily. "Come here."

Madge obeyed.

"Put your hand on my head."

"You haven't any fever today."

"It feels hot and it hurts."

Madge sat down on the little camp chair by the bed, and laid her hand on his forehead. She had noticed so many times how the hair waved upwards from it crisply. Sometimes she had just run her fingers through it lightly, out of sympathy and pity.

"Talk to me," she said, his eyes closed. "I was amazed at her serene confession. And with her hand on his head, couldn't she feel the pulses beating? Didn't every beat count Madge, Madge, Madge?"

"Don't you want your letters now, Mr. Griffin. Probably your wife is anxious about you, and I might write a line to her for you."

Somewhere Madge had read that a nurse must never excite a patient. The next few moments convinced her of the wisdom contained in this admonition. She put her patient back on his pillows forcibly, and held him while he made her understand that he was absolutely and positively a bachelor.

"But Mrs. Peck said—"

"Mrs. Peck doesn't know anything about me. She surmises. Those letters are from—"

He began to cough and she waited to give him a drink.

He lay back weakly on the pillows. Madge crushed an impulse to slip her arm beneath his head and comfort him. "Read them to me," he ordered.

It was getting shadowy in the upper back room. The sun had slipped down past the red brick row across the street. Madge sat close to the bedside and read the letters from Maine, the heavy white letters, with the feminine handwriting on them. And they told her more of Gadsby Griffin than she could ever have known from his own lips.

They were from his mother, beautiful letters to "Boy Dearest" and they told all the home news, and of how she hoped he was well and making good, as he called it.

He must not worry one bit about them at home. If he needed money, father would send him a check. It was wrong of him to be proud, and not accept it, just in these first few months of struggle to the great metropolis.

In a little while he would have his degree, and after that all the world lay before him to choose from.

"What are you doing here?" asked Madge when she had finished. Her voice was a little unsteady.

"Post grad, course at Columbia in law."

"He reached for her hand, and laid it on his lips. 'Who's Ben?'"

"Why, my brother. Madge's dark eyes opened wide in surprise. "I thought you knew. He is married and lives uptown. It makes it so much nicer for me having him here. You really must stay on the pillows, Mr. Griffin. You're too weak to sit up."

"I'm not weak," retorted Gad, comfortably. "I've beaten old pneumonia all hollow. The elephant that has been perched on my chest for days has disappeared, and my head doesn't twaggle about like a toy balloon, Madge."

"Yes? Do you want something?"

"I want you," said Gad firmly. "I'm so relieved over that confounded doctor. I saw him kiss you. I thought he had a right to. You don't know what jealousy is, sweetheart."

"Mrs. Peck is coming upstairs. Let go my hand."

"No need, no need," smiled Gad. "She may as well know first as last. I've intended marrying you ever since you first came down to breakfast. And it's all right, isn't it, dear? Listen. Would it be according to Ben's notions of pneumonia treatment for patients if you just put your face down near mine, just once for now?"

Madge knelt impulsively, and laughed as she held him close to her, her cheek on his. Mrs. Peck took one look at the picture from the top of the stairs.

"Well, for the mercy's sake," she exclaimed. "Better half close the door, children. I'll set the agog right here on the landing nurse. He needs to be sustained."

"O, thank you, Mrs. Peck," called Madge, but Gad put in, "I'm sustained, Mrs. Peck, thanks."

AN ONLY CHILD

BY ELSIE ENDICOTT.

HEY spoke in undertones, furtively watching the door.

"But what is to be done with her?" Mrs. Calhoun asked. Her tone was colorless, hopeless.

"That's it, my dear," Laetitia's whole life seems to be centered in that one purpose; she sees only one goal—strives for only one. Why, I can't even make an engagement for her any more for fear of interfering with a lesson or a class or an appointment to practice with some one or other. And she's our only daughter."

Mrs. Calhoun raised her hand cautiously. "Do be careful, dear; she's upstairs, and I wouldn't have her hear us for the world. We mustn't break her heart in trying to thwart her ambition. That would be cruel."

"The whole thing's cruel," Mr. Calhoun said, desperately.

"Presently the man looked up, a bright light in his eyes.

"Suppose—suppose, dear, we contrive to tell her I have had reverses in business and cannot longer afford to pay for her lessons. We can curtail expenses and live consistently with the statement, can we not, dear?" he asked eagerly.

"Y-o-s—we could, I suppose, but would that do any good? Isn't Laetitia just the sort who would go to work—sing in a chorus, in cafes—anywhere—to earn enough to study? Any girl with her energy and determination will find a way. And there is a way—if only she could see it—a way to make us all happy."

"How's that?"

"If she would only fall in love, desperately in love, and be made to feel that she was making a great sacrifice for the man she loved in giving up her career—her music, she would be happy—we would be happy and she would be saved all the pain of failure that is sure to be hers if she continues to believe she will be a grand opera star."

Mrs. Calhoun had studied her daughter; she knew that the girl lived for dramatic effects that heroics appealed to her. More than once she had prayed that her girl might fall in love with a man who would insist on her giving up her musical career.

Unlike many mothers, Laetitia's parent was not blind to the shortcomings of her child. Laetitia could not sing—and it was her one aim and object in life—to sing, to go into grand opera, to shine before the footlights.

Teachers struggling for the dollars that came to them from lessons, flattered her and led her on toward her imagined place among the stars. Friends who were kindhearted asked her to sing; and even her father and mother hadn't the heart to tell her she could not.

Laetitia had become so engrossed in her studies of music in all branches pertaining to voice culture that she had forsaken most of her friends; she had withdrawn from social life saying that she must save her strength for her work. The home that had once been the scene of gay little parties was now quiet after dinner, and the father and mother sat silently reading under the library lamp.

Laetitia was in bed gathering energy for the following day's lessons. She was working diligently on the opera scores in the faint hope that she might have opportunity to sing before a manager.

"Whom could she love?" Mr. Calhoun broke in abruptly, as if the idea conveyed to him by his wife had just appeared to his rather thick vision.

Mrs. Calhoun smiled. "Better—who loves her enough to make her give up her career, my dear?"

"Well, put it your way—who's the man? I'll ask him here, throw them together, do anything to save our little girl from the awful failure I can see coming her way," the father said, sitting up energetically. "Do you think young Davis is hopelessly discouraged?"

"He ought to be—the way she's treated him. But if he showed half the determination about winning Laetitia that she shows about winning fame he'd have her," Mrs. Calhoun declared.

"Nice fellow—Davis," mumbled the father.

"He's all of that. I had quite made up my mind to him."

"How-to-make-up-Laetitia's mind to him is the question now," remarked Mr. Calhoun with a hopeless inflection in his voice.

Mrs. Calhoun raised a silencing finger, remarking, "Listen, I hear footsteps—Laetitia is coming down."

Mr. Calhoun began to read, ostentatiously. Mrs. Calhoun, too, became absorbed in her magazine.

"Mother," faltered Laetitia at her elbow.

"THE WHOLE THING'S CRUEL," MR. CALHOUN SAID.

Her mother looked up. Laetitia's hair was hanging in two braids across her shoulders; they glistened in the lamp light. Her long rose-colored kimono fell to her toes, and she crumpled down on her mother's footstool, burying her face in her mother's lap.

Mrs. Calhoun looked quickly across at her husband, who, in turn, peered across the top of his glasses at his daughter's bowed head; then he looked up quickly and held his wife's eyes for an instant. Had she heard? Mrs. Calhoun put her hand tenderly on the girl's hair.

"What is it, dearie?" she asked.

Laetitia burst into sobs; her whole body began to tremble.

"Here—take mine, daughter," said her father quickly.

"I want to tell you both all about it," the girl began, plying the ample bit of linen diligently.

"Go right on, dearie," Mrs. Calhoun said, stroking the hand she held.

"It's about me—about me and my career—and Tom," she confessed. "You don't understand how it has been, perhaps."

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Calhoun said a word; they both wondered if she had heard.

"I have worked so hard to be a success for you, two—I am your only child, your only hope. I wanted so much to do something big and wonderful for you—Mother and father, dear—but O—I can't give up Tom for the empty fame of an opera star."

"I've tried so hard. I've spent all this money of father's and yours for music and you've given me every advantage and it seems so ungrateful of me to—give it all up for—love."

She hid her face and the father and mother looked at each other again.

down for, mother," Laetitia whispered from the mother's lap.

Mr. Calhoun was perceptibly ill at ease. He tried to remember all they had said; he would have given all he owned to have retraced his words; let her slug; let her practice; let her go into anything that she thought she wanted but—never let him see his little girl so unhappy again. That was his only wish.

"Let me have you handkerchief, mother," Laetitia said, raising her head.

"Here—take mine, daughter," said her father quickly.

"I want to tell you both all about it," the girl began, plying the ample bit of linen diligently.

"Go right on, dearie," Mrs. Calhoun said, stroking the hand she held.

"It's about me—about me and my career—and Tom," she confessed. "You don't understand how it has been, perhaps."

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Calhoun said a word; they both wondered if she had heard.

"I have worked so hard to be a success for you, two—I am your only child, your only hope. I wanted so much to do something big and wonderful for you—Mother and father, dear—but O—I can't give up Tom for the empty fame of an opera star."

"I've tried so hard. I've spent all this money of father's and yours for music and you've given me every advantage and it seems so ungrateful of me to—give it all up for—love."

She hid her face and the father and mother looked at each other again.

"Tom says I must give it up—my career—or he will go away to the end of the world where he can never, never even hear of me," she said, bursting in fresh sobs.

"Dearie, dearie," protested the mother, with emotion, "don't do that. We want you to be happy—we want you to marry Tom. We—we've been really disappointed. Daddy and I, because he did not come around any more."

Laetitia looked up, a gleam of light shining in her swollen eyes. She glanced from one to the other. Her father smiled and nodded. "Have you, really? Do—do you like him?"

"We—we love him," Mrs. Calhoun said, earnestly.

"O, mother!" cried Laetitia, climbing, like a little girl, to her mother's lap and squeezing her round the neck—"Do you truly? And I won't have to work so hard to try to be a success in order to make you proud of me? O—O!"

In spite of herself, the mother's eyes overflowed with tears. She was happy to speak. And it was Tom Davis, after all!

"I've always thought it was an awful thing to be an only child, the one hope of a pair of loving parents—it's been such hard work! And now there will be two of us to make you happy. Daddy—ask Tom to come to dinner tomorrow night that—that you want to show him something—anything to get him here."

"I'll ask him to breakfast—if you say so," laughed the father wiping his glasses carefully; they had become moist and dimmed.

A BRAVE MAN

BY WALTER GREGORY.

ILBERT FARRANDALE had reached the age of 82 without ever having had a serious affair of the heart.

"I would rather be free to go and come as I choose, than to be bound with the matrimonial chain," he told his friend, Frank Whiting, having overtaken that young man on the street a few days before the date announced for his marriage to pretty Kitty Slocum. "I hope you will be happy, Frank, but nothing cuts like the fetters with which one has manacled himself." He smiled with the complacency of an assured widower.

"O, rubbish!" retorted his unappreciative friend. "Wait till you find the right one and all the chains in creation wouldn't keep you from marrying her—if she would have you."

Mrs. Horton, the housekeeper, had taken the best of care of the big Farrandale mansion for many years. Gilbert had come into possession of this fine old place upon the passing of his uncle, and Mrs. Horton was part of the inheritance.

Gilbert Farrandale was left an orphan, and his bachelor uncle had adopted him as his own child. Undoubtedly living all these years with a confirmed celibate had much to do with the nephew's profound knowledge on the subject of love and marriage.

Gilbert had received an invitation to young Whiting's wedding. The appointed day and hour found him waiting in the Slocum home for the comparatively two foolish youngsters, as he regarded them.

Kitty Slocum in filmy white advanced down the long room with Frank Whiting at her side. She was pretty enough to touch even a harder heart than Gilbert's.

Gilbert's eyes fell next on the cousin, who, with Kitty's brother Ernest, followed the bridal pair, and the doubts of bachelor freedom began suddenly to fade for him.

The clergyman joined the young people in marriage, and Gilbert was among the first to offer congratulations. Then he turned to speak with Ernest Slocum, and obtained an inroduction to the cousin, the mere sight of whom had given a new outlook on life.

Doris—Doris was the picture of youth and happiness. Her big brown eyes were enough in themselves to have made her beautiful. She had come from her home in a distant part of the state to act as her cousin's lady in waiting, and she was to remain with the Slocum family indefinitely.

After the Slocum household had settled back into its regular routine, Gilbert Farrandale found his way there frequently, but his friends were no longer favored with anti-matrimonial lectures.

Doris always met Gilbert with perfect friendliness, but there was nothing in her manner to indicate that the arrow which had pierced his heart had even touched her own.

Gilbert tried to reassure himself with the hope that as he really knew so little of feminine ways, there might be the usual attitude in such a case.

Finding Doris alone on the piazza one evening, about six weeks after his first meeting with her, Gilbert resolved to know his fate, and her glance of kindly greeting gave him courage to say:

"Doris, I love you; will you marry me?" then he thought, "I must be crazy to put it so stupidly, and wait in an agony of apprehension for her answer."

Doris smiled, broadened, and she replied calmly. "Why, Mr. Farrandale, I could not think of being so cruel as to let you manacle yourself with the fetters which cut so deeply."

Gilbert's heart seemed to sink into the earth on hearing these fateful words.

"I was a fool to say that," he declared. "I thought I was so wise, when in fact I had no idea what love meant, but now I have learned. I love you Doris. Do not punish me for ignorance—I know the truth now."

He held out his hands to her in frank appeal.

Doris' look grew kinder but, alas, there was no love for him in the brown eyes.

"Love cannot be forced," she said, "and sometimes I think it is not my nature to love any one person, but to care for each of those who are dear to me, and they are many."

Had Gilbert been in the right mood, he might have smiled at this alluring like utterance from one who was so plainly made for love. But he was far too much in earnest to see anything humorous in her remark.

"I shall win you away from all the others," he said positively, and here their conversation ended, the family coming out to join them.

Later, as Gilbert walked homeward, Doris' thought over the scene with her suit had received no encouragement. "But I shall not give up—I shall love me," he said to himself with a firm setting of the lips.

The week-end brought the bride and groom and a surprise Kitty's relatives had been planning. This was the presentation of a handsome pair of saddle horses to the newly married couple with a third beautiful mount for Doris.

It had long been Gilbert's habit to take a daily gallop, and it became a regular custom for the four young people to enjoy a morning ride together.

One morning in early September the four started on their usual ride, choosing a beautiful path through the woods. Doris and Gilbert rode in advance of the others, and after canter-ing for some distance under the dense shade of the massive oaks, they slowed down.

Suddenly at the left side of the road ahead of Doris there appeared a round bound with a broken chain dangling from his collar. He was a fierce-looking animal, and his swift and silent coming had startled them. Instantly he made a spring at the neck of Doris' horse, and the frightened beast reared backward. Doris was a good rider and retained her seat, but as her horse's forefeet touched the ground again the bound maned a savage leap and this time fastened his fangs in the shoulder of the animal.

Gilbert sprang to the ground and brought down the handle of his heavy hunting crop with all his strength upon the bound's head. The crashing blow dazed the brute, and he loosened his hold. Then he made a ferocious spring for Gilbert's throat.

"Oh, Gilbert, Gilbert!"

It was the first time Doris had ever called his name, and her love spoke in the cry. It seemed to give Gilbert superhuman strength, for as the bound leaped he struck it again with the loaded crop square on its massive head, the blow crushed through into its brain, and the furious monster dropped to the ground, lifeless.

It was a very thankful but very nerve-shaken party of four that turned homeward. The wound given to Doris' horse was bleeding freely, and the animal was trembling from shock. Doris dismounted and Gilbert placed her upon his own mount, leading her wounded one.

"Gilbert, you are a brave man," said Frank Whiting, as they started homeward. We all owe you a deal of gratitude for acting so promptly and so well."

"Indeed, I thank you for my life," said Doris eagerly.

"Did only what you would have done had you been nearest, Frank. And I am sorry, Miss Larimer, that I was not in time to save your horse from all harm, though I think the wound is only a slight one—and will heal rapidly."

Gilbert received a very different answer from the first, when he next appealed to Doris for her love.

"As that awful beast sprang at you I learned that one person had become very dear to me," she said

AUTO POLO SECURED FOR FAIR; SIX EVENTS; FREE ATTRACTION

Considered a Novel As Well As Dare-devil Feature; Dickinson Signs Exhibitors From State Fair;
Children's Day on Friday

Probably the most thrilling and spectacular entertainment ever offered the people of this city will be the three games of auto polo which will be played during the Fresno District Fair next week. This sport is regarded as one of the most dangerous ever invented and the players are regarded by life insurance companies as hazardous in the extreme and in the same class with aviators.

Like aviation, auto polo requires a specially trained man but he must have other attributes also. He must be a dare-devil from the start and he must be exceedingly calm throughout the exciting minutes of the play. It is generally supposed that automobile racing drivers assume unusual risks in the pursuit of their occupation and most people would suppose that they would take naturally to the game of auto polo, but such is not the case. A number of the best drivers in America have been approached at various times in an effort to secure them for this game but almost without exception they have declined after witnessing the first contest.

NOT FOR EARL COOPER

When approached on this subject recently Earl Cooper said, "Not for me. I like speed but I also have a home that I think something of and I have no desire to be taken there in pieces." "Wild" Bob Burnham, who is supposed to be afraid of nothing that rolls, declined an offer which carried a handsome salary with it, and Lincoln Beachy, who is acknowledged by even the most experienced aviators as

MESSANGER BOY IS "BLIND PIG;" GETS NABBED BY POLICE

Detectives Say He Had Worked Up Big Business
For Sunday Trade

A messenger boy as a "blind pig" in the latest invention to get around the "dry" ordinance on Sunday when "Tom" Renna was arrested by Detectives Gough and Knox for peddling booze. Renna was judged in jail. A Caberaz was also arrested by the same officers for running a "blind pig" near the Santa Fe depot.

The detectives overheard negroes in a lodging house yesterday order beer from the messenger boy over the telephone. When the bottles were delivered by the messenger boy he was arrested. He refused to tell where he secured the liquor, but the police say it is furnished him by relatives in the Italian quarters and that he has worked up a big business on Sunday.

The messenger boy was found in the state. The boys are in prime condition and will make a creditable display worthy of any state fair exhibit.

"I am not sure, but believe that McLaughlin Bros. of Columbus, Ohio, will bring their exhibit of draft horses here for the fair. These people have what is considered by many to be the best horses of their kind in this country. There will be a large local display of Percherons.

"The exhibit of farm machinery will show all the modern improvements and special machines of various kinds that have been brought to notice within the last year's time. There will be all

SAYS 30 DEER WERE KILLED IN WATER CONDUIT

A. D. Ferguson Returns
From Trip of Investigation to Sequoia Park

Power Company Installs
Crossings Over Waterway To Aid Deer

A. D. Ferguson, fish and game commissioner for the fourth district of California, has just returned from a trip into the Sequoia National Park, where he went to investigate the stories that have been circulated of late, telling of the great loss of life to deer in the conduit of the Mt. Whitney Power Company. He reports that he does not believe that more than thirty deer have been lost in the conduit since it was opened a short time ago, and that measures have been undertaken by the power company to prevent any more deer being lost in this waterway. It is built of concrete and connects the middle fork of the Kaweah river with power house No. 3. Some reports have been circulated that over forty deer lost their lives recently in this conduit.

The waterway runs alongside of the mountain, the upper side flush with the mountain itself and the lower side not less than four feet above the ground and in many cases being on an average of eight or ten feet above ground.

The people in the district through which the waterway passes are of different minds as to how the deer are lost in the conduit, according to Ferguson. Some of them believe that the deer fall into the passage in attempting to jump from the lower side on their way up the mountain.

This theory is discarded by the officials of the power company, as they claim that the deer fall into the flume on their way down the mountain. To back up their theory, the power company officials point out that deer tracks can be found in great numbers along the upper side of the waterway. These they say are made by deer passing back and forth looking for a place to cross the conduit.

In order that the deer may be able to cross the waterway without jumping, Ferguson says that the power company has installed a number of bridges at intervals along the conduit so that the deer can cross either way upon them.

To further aid the deer, in case any of them should jump from the under side, or in their way down the mountain fall in the conduit, the power company, upon the suggestion of Ferguson, is making plans to install several brush crossing racks near the bridges.

In case a deer found itself in the conduit, it would be carried down stream to one of these brush racks, which will be built on a gradual incline so that the deer can save itself by climbing out. This plan is believed by those interested in the saving of the deer to be one of the best that has been suggested so far.

Since the crossings were installed two weeks ago, no deer have been found in the conduit by the patrolmen.

Ferguson also investigated the reports in the effect that deer which had fallen in the conduit were killed by those who found them in the stream. This report Ferguson believes to be exaggerated to a very large extent. He said that he found several cases where deer had been caught by patrolmen in the conduit, but that in each case the deer were rescued from their predicament and turned out loose. He says, however, that there may have been a case or so where an outsider has found a deer in the waterway and has killed it. As there are but few outsiders who enter into this district, he feels that such cases, if there are any, are rare.

There are a great many deer in the mountains this year, according to Ferguson. The strange part of it this year, he says, is that the majority of them are found in the lower mountains. The most of those that were killed this year were also found in the foothill country.

SCENE AT A RECENT GAME OF AUTO POLO PLAYED BY THE TEAM THAT IS TO APPEAR AT THE FRESNO DISTRICT FAIR NEXT WEEK AS A FREE ATTRACTION the "king of the air" and a dare-devil in general, recently refused to watch the play because he said it was too dangerous.

Auto polo is played in periods of ten minutes each with a rest of five minutes between the sessions. It resembles the game of pony polo only in this respect and that the efforts of the players are to advance the ball toward the goal posts. There is seldom a game of the old fashioned kind in which there is not an injury to at least one player and broken bones are frequent occurrences but in the new game the risk is far greater and Speaking last night of the exhibits that would appear here which were of the best on display at Sacramento, Dickinson said, "We will have a good display of all kinds of dairy cattle at the coming district fair. Herds of Jerseys, Red Poles, Holsteins, Guernseys and other well known breeds of cattle will be shipped here shortly for exhibition purposes. The people here will be able to view the best cattle exhibits that were shown at Sacramento. The owners of these herds were justly proud of the display they made last week.

"The exhibit of cattle and horses of the San Luis Obispo Polytechnic school, which comprises about two car loads of live stock, was also shipped up to be here next week. These animals certainly do know how to raise cattle and horses.

"The swine exhibit will comprise some of the best specimens of Berkshire and Poland Chinas that are to be shown. In addition to these, there will be working apparatus, creamery machinery, including separators of all sorts and sizes, engines to run them, churns, butter workers, testers of all kinds and other articles of a like nature, children raising appliances and power machines.

"In all, I think that we can safely say that the coming Fresno district fair will be one of the largest and best of its kind ever shown in the State of California, let alone the San Joaquin valley."

CHILDREN'S DAY

Friday will be children's day at the fair and for this reason the pushmobile contest which is planned will be held on the same day. The officials of the association are making special preparations to see that the children are properly entertained on this occasion. Several other stunts of interest to the children are also scheduled on this day.

School Teachers Should Wear Becoming Glasses

SELLS BICYCLE IN MERCED AND TAKES CONFEDERATE BILLS

Fresnan Discovers Swindle
Here When He Tries To Pass Currency

Araban Hernandez of this city, said his bicycle in Merced Saturday to a Mexican for the sum of $50 and upon his arrival here yesterday discovered that he had been paid in old Confederate bills. Hernandez took the matter up with the police and the Mexican officers were asked to make a search for the Mexican who had swindled the Fresno man. Hernandez did not try to cash any of the currency until he arrived here. When the money was turned down in a store he discovered that he had been swindled.

YOUTHFUL FORGER IS LODGED IN BASTILE

L. J. Grace Passes Bogus
Check Here and Also in Visalia

L. J. Grace, aged 19 years, wanted here for passing a forged check on Self-White Company last Friday for $24, was arrested late Saturday night in Visalia and returned to the county jail here last night by Deputy Sheriff Thorsdahl.

From a newspaper account of Grace's arrest a Visalia merchant ascertained that he had been passing a check for $25 check. Grace had been employed in the office of the railroad company building a line from Minster to Redbanks. He

PLAN BIG RECEPTION IN HONOR OF TARPEY

Will Be Feted By Chamber of Commerce On His Return From Washington

Plans are now under way by the Fresno County Chamber of Commerce for a large reception to be tendered in honor of M. P. Tarpey upon his arrival in this city from Washington the early part of next month. Tarpey was sent East by the Chamber of Commerce to lobby against the imposition of a tax of $1.10 a gallon on the brandy used in the fortification of wine. A wine tax was proposed by Senator Pomeroy of Ohio. Through the efforts of Tarpey and other Californians who went to Washington in the interest of the grape growers of this state, this measure was thrown out.

The monster reception that is planned in honor of Tarpey will be followed by a banquet in this city at which all those interested in the work which Tarpey has done for the Chamber of Commerce officials, wine men, and raisin grape growers, will be invited to participate in.

This matter will come up at the meeting of the board of directors next Wednesday night.

ALLEGED DESERTER OF WIFE GIVES UP

Samuel B. Woolsey, wanted by the police here on a charge of deserting his wife, appeared in police headquarters yesterday afternoon and surrendered himself to Desk Sergeant Truitt. Woolsey was immediately released on his own recognizance by Police Judge Briggs. The warrant was sworn to by Lena Woolsey. Woolsey was in Bakersfield and came here after hearing of the issuance of the warrant.

Woolsey had been charged with the forging of a check. Hatch was informed by Nell White of the forgery and from the description realized that Grace had passed the check. He found him on the streets in Visalia Saturday night and turned him over to the officers.

CLOTHES FOUND ON BANK OF DITCH; "SUICIDE" DRUNK

Man Disrobes and Then Walks Half Mile Looking For "Soft" Spot

That appearances are not always truthful was demonstrated yesterday morning at 5 o'clock when a pile of clothing was found neatly piled on the bank of a ditch on Merced street, west of town. The man who stumbled upon the clothing yesterday morning immediately jumped at the conclusion that a man had committed suicide by leaping into the water.

He ran down Merced street and finally reached Engine House No. 3, from which place a call was sent for police headquarters. Patrolman Hattie, with visions of finding a dead man in the canal, was sent to investigate. He walked up the bank for half a mile and finally discovered the cause of the trouble. It was C. Colburn, not dead, but "dead drunk." His clothing were brought to the spot and he was dressed and sent home in an express wagon. The man mumbled that he had been unable to find his way home and decided to sleep on the ground. A few days later he walked for a half mile in which he searched for a "soft" spot to spend the night.

SHERIFF RETURNS FROM MOUNTAINS

Sheriff Walter McSwain and Attorney O. L. Everts returned yesterday from a vacation spent at the Pines, where they had much sport fishing and hunting. From the Pines they packed back into the mountains and spent a day and night in the cabin at Stanford L. White in the high Sierras. Both the sheriff and the lawyer feel much better after their week of "roughing it."

REALTY MEN FAVOR CITY BEAUTIFUL

Will Also Consider Plan
For Farmers' Institutes;
Nominees Named

The matter of a city beautiful will be taken up by the meeting of the board of directors of the Fresno Realty Exchange this morning and again by the members themselves at the evening session of the exchange. The evening meeting will be given over mainly to the planning of a series of farmers' institutes to be held in the county. The nominating committee will also make its report at the evening session.

Before the meeting tonight the committee in charge of the city beautiful campaign for the realty exchange will confer with the city authorities to see just what matters should be taken up by them. The realty men favor the idea of making all property owners keep their property in a respectable shape at all times of the year.

There will be several speakers on hand in the evening to discuss the question of farmers' institutes from beginning to end. It is possible that some action on the matter will be taken this evening.

The nominating committee will report at the night session the names of the following members as those whom they have chosen to run for directors for the next year: W. W. Stanforth, Herbert Levy, N. B. Carline, W. L. Chappell, J. A. Stebbins, A. H. Alexander, W. McDaniel, Frank Connelley, W. J. Kuttel and H. Jacobson. As Stebbins stated at the last meeting of the exchange that he would not serve on the board of directors next year and that he thought it best to elect an online new board, the race will be between the other nine, seven of whom will be chosen as directors, the one receiving the highest number of ballots being president, and the next highest, vice-president.

Did You Ever

Stop to consider why we have grown to be twice as large as any other home-furnishing house in Fresno, though we have been in business only half as long as the majority of our competitors?

There is but one reason for this. It is because we are patronized by the most people. This would not be the case, were not our prices the lowest and our values the best. We sell more goods than the others; hence we must buy in much larger quantities. This gives us extra concessions from the factories in price, the benefit of which you receive. The largest store can always sell the cheapest. Call nish up. We are always glad to talk over your in and look over our enormous stock before you fur plans with you.
